

A

0 0
1
4
1 9 6
7
7
8

10 SOUTH HAVEN SENIOR LIBRARY FACILITY

INDEX TO FIRST LINES.

100 All day the stormy wind has blown
128 Am I too happy? Have I lost
24 Compromise! Who dares to speak it
84 Day by day, when the clear wind blows
3 Down the silent Mississippi
122 From the grave of a lovely maiden
27 God help us! Who's ready? There's danger
110 Hearts often die bitter deaths before
125 I am not afraid of dying
113 I am so blithe and glad to-day
115 If it were Allan's step that stirred
81 Like a strain of wondrous music rising up
136 Lo, in the east the wan moon climbs
97 Morn of Eden! All the angels must have 30 My home is drear and still to-night
101 My love, my love, when falls the summer rain
95 No! I never can forget
69 Noon by God's unerring dial
103 Not in a moment drops the rose
42 Now, Charley, on the knapsacks you'll find
46 Now must the storied Potomac

O for a summer day when time was young 111
O God of the Nations! our country we sing 15
O lift thy head, thou mountain lone 38
O my Poet! thou didst cast it 131
O Star-Spangled Banner! the Flag of our pride 21
Out of dreams, in the midnight gloom 75
O wailing Wind! what words are thine 105
Rear on high the scaffold-altar 51
Rose and amber round the sun 121
Rosy mouth and eyes of gray 127
Thank God! 'Tis the war-cry 66
The harvest-moon is waning 17
The household of a Roman, in Rome's luxurious 54
Their armor rings on a fairer field f-1
Then Delia with the dulcet voice came down 94
The snowy day was sinking down 133
The winds that once the Argo bore 49
Tis Indian Summer's richest latest day 88
Tis the time the corn was planted 35
To the minstrel said the king 74
Upon his cloak the Arab stands 90
What Alps of clouds! The distant, airy deep 77
When I am dead, O! let it be 139

9A
 9B
 9C
 9D
 9E
 9F
 9G
 9H
 9I
 9J
 9K
 9L
 9M
 9N
 9O
 9P 9Q
 9R
 9S
 9T
 9U
 9V
 9W
 9X
 9Y
 9Z
 9AA
 9AB
 9AC
 9AD
 9AE
 9AF
 9AG
 9AH
 9AI
 9AJ
 9AK
 9AL
 9AM
 9AN
 9AO
 9AP
 9AQ
 9AR
 9AS
 9AT
 9AU
 9AV
 9AW
 9AX
 9AY
 9AZ
 9BA
 9BB
 9BC
 9BD
 9BE
 9BF
 9BG
 9BH
 9BI
 9BJ
 9BK
 9BL
 9BM
 9BN
 9BO
 9BP
 9BQ
 9BR
 9BS
 9BT
 9BU
 9BV
 9BW
 9BX
 9BY 9BZ
 9CA
 9CB
 9CC
 9CD
 9CE
 9CF
 9CG
 9CH
 9CI
 9CJ
 9CK
 9CL
 9CM
 9CN
 9CO
 9CP
 9CQ
 9CR
 9CS
 9CT
 9CU
 9CV
 9CW
 9CX
 9CY
 9CZ
 9DA
 9DB
 9DC
 9DD
 9DE
 9DF
 9DG
 9DH
 9DI
 9DJ
 9DK
 9DL
 9DM
 9DN
 9DO
 9DP
 9DQ
 9DR
 9DS
 9DT
 9DU
 9DV
 9DW
 9DX
 9DY
 9DZ
 9EA
 9EB
 9EC
 9ED
 9EE
 9EF
 9EG
 9EH
 9EI
 9EJ
 9EK
 9EL
 9EM
 9EN
 9EO
 9EP
 9EQ
 9ER
 9ES
 9ET
 9EU
 9EV
 9EW
 9EX
 9EY
 9EZ
 9FA
 9FB
 9FC
 9FD
 9FE
 9FF
 9FG
 9FH
 9FI
 9FJ
 9FK
 9FL
 9FM
 9FN
 9FO
 9FP
 9FQ
 9FR
 9FS
 9FT
 9FU
 9FV
 9FW
 9FX
 9FY
 9FZ
 9GA
 9GB
 9GC
 9GD
 9GE
 9GF
 9GG
 9GH
 9GI
 9GJ
 9GK
 9GL
 9GM
 9GN
 9GO
 9GP
 9GQ
 9GR
 9GS
 9GT
 9GU
 9GV
 9GW
 9GX
 9GY
 9GZ
 9HA 9HB
 9HC
 9HD
 9HE
 9HF
 9HG
 9HH
 9HI
 9HJ
 9HK
 9HL
 9HM
 9HN
 9HO
 9HP
 9HQ
 9HR
 9HS
 9HT
 9HU
 9HV
 9HW
 9HX
 9HY
 9HZ
 9IA
 9IB
 9IC
 9ID
 9IE
 9IF
 9IG
 9IH
 9II
 9IJ
 9IK
 9IL
 9IM
 9IN
 9IO
 9IP
 9IQ
 9IR
 9IS
 9IT
 9IU
 9IV
 9IW
 9IX
 9IY
 9IZ
 9JA
 9JB
 9JC
 9JD
 9JE
 9JF
 9JG
 9JH
 9JI
 9JJ
 9JK
 9JL
 9JM
 9JN
 9JO
 9JP
 9JQ
 9JR
 9JS
 9JT 9JU
 9JV
 9JW
 9JX
 9JY
 9JZ
 9KA
 9KB
 9KC
 9KD
 9KE
 9KF
 9KG
 9KH
 9KI
 9KJ
 9KK
 9KL
 9KM
 9KN
 9KO
 9KP
 9KQ
 9KR
 9KS
 9KT
 9KU
 9KV
 9KW
 9KX
 9KY
 9KZ
 9LA
 9LB
 9LC
 9LD
 9LE
 9LF
 9LG
 9LH 9LI 9LJ
 9LK
 9LL
 9LM
 9LN
 9LO
 9LP
 9LQ
 9LR
 9LS
 9LT
 9LU
 9LV
 9LW
 9LX
 9LY
 9LZ
 9MA
 9MB
 9MC
 9MD
 9ME
 9MF
 9MG
 9MH
 9MI
 9MJ
 9MK
 9ML
 9MM
 9MN
 9MO
 9MP
 9MQ
 9MR
 9MS
 9MT
 9MU
 9MV
 9MW
 9MX
 9MY
 9MZ
 9NA
 9NB
 9NC
 9ND
 9NE
 9NF
 9NG
 9NH
 9NI
 9NJ
 9NK
 9NL
 9NM
 9NN
 9NO
 9NP 9NQ
 9NR
 9NS
 9NT
 9NU
 9NV
 9NW
 9NX
 9NY
 9NZ
 9OA
 9OB
 9OC
 9OD
 9OE
 9OF
 9OG
 9OH
 9OI
 9OJ
 9OK
 9OL
 9OM
 9ON
 9OO
 9OP
 9OQ 9OR 9OS 9OT
 9OU
 9OV
 9OW
 9OX
 9OY
 9OZ
 9PA
 9PB
 9PC
 9PD 9PE
 9PF
 9PG
 9PH
 9PI
 9PJ
 9PK
 9PL
 9PM
 9PN
 9PO
 9PP
 9PQ
 9PR
 9PS
 9PT
 9PU
 9PV
 9PW
 9PX
 9PY
 9PZ
 9QA
 9QB
 9QC
 9QD
 9QE
 9QF
 9QG
 9QH
 9QI
 9QJ
 9QK
 9QL
 9QM
 9QN
 9QO
 9QP
 9QQ
 9QR
 9QS
 9QT
 9QU
 9QV
 9QW
 9QX
 9QY
 9QZ
 9RA
 9RB
 9RC
 9RD
 9RE
 9RF
 9RG
 9RH
 9RI
 9RJ
 9RK
 9RL
 9RM
 9RN
 9RO
 9RP
 9RQ
 9RR
 9RS
 9RT
 9RU
 9RV
 9RW 9RX
 9RY
 9RZ
 9SA
 9SB
 9SC
 9SD
 9SE
 9SF
 9SG
 9SH
 9SI
 9SJ
 9SK
 9SL
 9SM
 9SN
 9SO
 9SP
 9SQ
 9SR
 9SS
 9ST
 9SU
 9SV
 9SW
 9SX
 9SY
 9SZ
 9TA
 9TB
 9TC
 9TD
 9TE
 9TF
 9TG
 9TH
 9TI
 9TJ
 9TK
 9TL
 9TM
 9TN
 9TO
 9TP
 9TQ
 9TR
 9TS
 9TT
 9TU
 9TV
 9TW
 9TX
 9TY
 9TZ
 9UA
 9UB
 9UC
 9UD
 9UE
 9UF
 9UG
 9UH
 9UI
 9UJ
 9UK
 9UL
 9UM
 9UN
 9UO
 9UP
 9UQ
 9UR
 9US
 9UT
 9UU 9UV
 9UW
 9UX
 9UY
 9UZ
 9VA
 9VB
 9VC
 9VD
 9VE
 9VF
 9VG
 9VH
 9VI
 9VJ
 9VK
 9VL
 9VM
 9VN
 9VO
 9VP
 9VQ
 9VR
 9VS
 9VT
 9VU
 9VV
 9VW
 9VX
 9VY
 9VZ
 9WA
 9WB
 9WC
 9WD
 9WE
 9WF
 9WG
 9WH
 9WI
 9WJ
 9WK
 9WL
 9WM
 9WN
 9WO
 9WP
 9WQ
 9WR
 9WS
 9WT
 9WU
 9WV
 9WW
 9WX
 9WY
 9WZ
 9XA
 9XB
 9XC
 9XD
 9XE
 9XF
 9XG
 9XH
 9XI
 9XJ
 9XK
 9XL
 9XM
 9XN
 9XO
 9XP
 9XQ
 9XR
 9XS
 9XT
 9XU
 9XV
 9XW
 9XX
 9XY
 9XZ
 9YA
 9YB
 9YC
 9YD
 9YE
 9YF
 9YG
 9YH
 9YI
 9YJ
 9YK
 9YL
 9YM
 9YN
 9YO
 9YP
 9YQ
 9YR
 9YS
 9YT
 9YU
 9YV
 9YW 9YX
 9YY
 9YZ
 9ZA
 9ZB
 9ZC
 9ZD
 9ZE
 9ZF
 9ZG
 9ZH
 9ZI
 9ZJ
 9ZK
 9ZL
 9ZM
 9ZN 9ZO
 9ZP
 9ZQ
 9ZR
 9ZS
 9ZT
 9ZU
 9ZV
 9ZW
 9ZX
 9ZY
 9ZZ

GOOD NIGHT

By EDNA DEAN PROCTOR

Edna Dean Proctor was born in Henniker, N H, Oct 10, 1838; died at Frammingham, Mass, Dec 18, 1923. She received her early education in Concord, N H, removed to Brooklyn, N Y, and later made her home in Frammingham, Mass. She traveled extensively abroad and contributed largely to magazine literature.

Now fades the sun, and one by one
The stars gleam soft and fair;
No robin sings, no swallow wings
Its eager flight in air.

But only silent dews distill,
To fall in fairy rain;
And only whispering breezes thrill
The hush of grove and plain.

The lily slumbers on the lake,
Where not a ripple stirs;
The hare lies crouched amid the brake,
The partridge 'neath the firs.

And down the lawn the roses droop
Their crimson and their snow;
And poppies hide their scarlet pride
And wait the hour to blow.

Good night! good night! the moon will light
The East before the dawn,
The stars arise to gem the skies
Where there have journeyed on.

Good night! and sweetest dreams be thine
Through all their shining way,
Till darkness goes, and bird and rose
With rapture greet the day.

1958

Handwritten text, possibly a name or title, in cursive script.

Handwritten text, possibly a name or title, in cursive script.

we rejoice thereat, for he was ac-
Dec. 16 - 1925

Edna Dean Proctor's Poetry

The Complete Poetical Works of Edna Dean Proctor. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Company.

A FEW years ago everyone had a bound volume of Miss Proctor's poems on the parlor table, and a complete edition, pleasantly bound and illustrated with a picture of the author, will revive old memories, personal and national. She was a great patriot. Her Civil War poems are full of the excitement and high ideals of the period, the best being the one on the death of John Brown.

Then there are the verses to "Columbia," in various combinations, and to New Hampshire, which she loved so dearly:

Where the great Stone-Face looms changeless, calm

As the Sphinx that couches on Egypt's sands,
And the fir and the sassafras yield their balm Sweet as the odors of morning-lands to the Indians, especially the well-known "Song of the Ancient People," with its haunting refrain:

For we are the Ancient People.

Born with the wind and rain.

to Spanish America, with its "bells of Spain that mark the hour"; to fair scenes all over the earth, for she was an inveterate traveler—Russia, America, the East; to Christmas and Easter, and many more. They are full of the gentle spirit that marked great ladies once, though they "bear no crown upon their brow, and boast no lineage royal," of a bright love of country which we miss in this time of Englishistic depreciation of the "American Scene," and of a delicate beauty which awakens old sensations and new American pride.

NATIONAL POEMS.

THEIR armor rings on a fairer field
Than the Greek and the Trojan fiercely trod,
For Freedom's sword is the blade they wield,
And the light above is the smile of God.
So, in his isle of calm delight,
Jason may sleep the years away;
For the Heroes live, and the sky is bright,
And the world is a braver world to-day.

20721

POEMS

BY

EDNA DEAN PROCTOR

NEW YORK:

PUBLISHED BY HURD AND HOUGHTON.

BOSTON: E. P. DUTTON AND COMPANY.

1866.

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1866, by HURD AND HOUGHTON, in the Clerk's Office of the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

RIVERSIDE, CAMBRIDGE: STEREOTYPED AND PRINTED BY
H. O. HOUGHTON AND COMPANY.

CONTENTS.

NATIONAL POEMS.

	PAGE
THE MISSISSIPPI.....	3
HYMN FOR THE NATION.....	15
HARVEST AND LIBERTY.....	17
THE STRIPES AND THE STARS.....	21
COMPROMISE.....	24
WHO 'S READY.....	27
BY THE SHENANDOAH.....	30
THE HUNDRED DAYS' MEN.....	35
KEARSARGE.....	38
AT HOME.....	42
THE GRAVE OF LINCOLN.....	46
HEROES.....	49
THE VIRGINIA SCAFFOLD.....	51
THE WHITE SLAVES.....	54
THE SLAVE SALE.....	59
FOR FREEDOM.....	66
CHIMES OF NOON.....	69

MISCELLANEOUS POEMS.

CONSUMMATION.....	75
CLOUDS.....	77
THY PSYCHE.....	81
THE WELCOME SLEEP.....	84
INDIAN SUMMER.....	88

	PAGE
THE PRAYER IN THE DESERT.....	90
ON THE LAWN.....	94
TAKE HEART.....	100
IN DREAMS.....	101
DAILY DYING.....	103
THE WIND IN THE PINE.....	105
HEART-DEATHS.....	110
A SUMMER DAY.....	111
THE BLUEBIRD.....	113
ALLAN.....	115
HEAVEN, O LORD, I CANNOT LOSE.....	118
NIGHT-FALL.....	121
THE BIRD AT GREENWOOD.....	122
TRUST.....	125
WINTHROP EARL.....	127
THE PRIEST AND I.....	128
ROBERT BURNS.....	131
THE EVENING ANGEL.....	133
THE PRISONER'S RELEASE.....	136
WHEN I AM DEAD.....	139

THE MISSISSIPPI.

DOWN the silent Mississippi, with his saintly soul aflame,
Twice a hundred years are numbered since Marquette, rejoicing, came.

All the winter in his cabin high among the Huron snows,

Gaining lore of forest hunters, tracing maps by firelight glows,

Offering to the Blessed Virgin morn and evening vow and prayer

That his eyes might view the River flowing southward broad and fair, —

Wondrous grace ! upon its bosom, glad beneath the summer blue,

Rapt in visions, lost in praises, lo ! he guides his light canoe !

Winding 'mid the wooded islands tangled deep with musky vines ;

Flower-enchanted, past the prairies with their dim horizon lines ;
By the fierce Missouri water, dark in gorge and cataract wiles,
Down from nameless regions rolling, restless,
thrice a thousand miles ;
Past Ohio, loveliest river, all its banks aflush with rose
While the red-bud tints the woodlands and the lavish laurel blows ;
By the belts of odorous cedar, through the cypress-swamps below,
Till he greets its wider grandeur, knows the secret of its flow ;
Fainting then from summer fervors, homeward turns in sacred awe,
Dying humbly 'mid the Hurons by the windy , Mackinaw.

Then La Salle, impatient, fearless, took the Father's idle oar,
Longing for the larger splendor, listening for the ocean roar !
Under Bluffs that seek the beauty of the upper shores to win ;
Past the Arkansaw, slow-drifting with its mountain tribute in ;

By the bend where sad De Soto, with his high Castilian pride,
Lulled forever and lamented, sleeps, a king,
beneath the tide ;
Through the forests, perfume-haunted, weird
moss waving to and fro, (There the cottonwood towers stately, and the tall magnolias blow !)
Past the bayous, still and sombre, where the alligator swims,
And at noonday, on the shore, the paroquet his plumage trims ;
Gliding down by green savannas — ho ! the wind blows cool and free !
Bright, beyond, the Gulf is gleaming — lo ! the River finds the Sea !
Out of mystery, out of silence, now the mighty stream is won, — Rear the cross, O joyful Boatman ! chant sweet hymns at set of sun !

Ah, La Salle, Marquette, De Soto ! boatmen
bold in song and story,
Lighting up the river romance there are later deeds of glory.
Lonely was the stream, the forest, as ye dropped,
with measured calm,

Down to golden zones of summer through the fresh world's breeze and balm ; —
But the Indian, silent gazing, half in welcome, half in fear ;
On the grassy plains the bison, in the dewy
glades the deer ;
Not a sound to break the stillness save the song of woodland bird,
Or the panther's cry at evening from the cypress thickets heard ;
Or the eagle's scream, as northward to his cooler lakes he flew,
Fainter ringing down the valley till he faded in the blue.
Twice a hundred years are numbered, and the red man roams no more Through the green aisles of the forest, — by the reedy, open shore ;
With the startled deer and bison he has fled before the bands
That your fleet canoes have followed from the wondering father-lands.
Now a people build its borders ; now the great fleets hasten down
With the sheaves of many a prairie, with the wealth of many a town ;

Decks piled high from tropic harvest in the warmer realms below, —
Rice and sugar from the cane-fields, and the cotton's downy snow ;
Laden sea-craft inland sailing, rafts that find the current's fall,
Smoke of steamer, call of pilot, from the Gulf to high St. Paul ;
And the thronged, exultant River is a nation's heart, whose hands
Far to eastward, far to westward, touch the shining ocean sands.

Will ye trust the strange recital, — tale that only fiend should tell ?

When the nation's morn was fairest, black the night of Treason fell !

Traitors claiming all the Southland, and the River once so free,

Under forts and frowning ridges, rolling, alien,
to the sea !

Freedom's banner madly trampled, and the motto flaunted high,

“ On the Slave we found Dominion, — who shall dare our right deny ? ”

God of Justice ! how our rally rang through all the startled air !

Million-voiced, the North made answer, rising calm and strong from prayer !

Caught the rifle, clasped the sabre, put the pen, the ploughshare by, —

Fathers, brothers, surging Southward when they heard the gathering cry,

Till, from green Dakotah uplands to the rocky isles of Maine,

Every hamlet, every city, lent its bravest to the train ;

Freedom's flag above them waving, freedom's songs triumphant sung,

Ne'er, I ween, to such an army, foe the gage of battle flung.

Then they saw the captive River, and from every port and bay

Summoned straight each armèd vessel that at anchor watching lay ; —

From Pacific ; from the islands where the spice-winds softly blow ;

Off the sultry Afric border ; shores where Europe's olives grow.

All too few ; — in hill-side pastures 'neath the axe the stout oaks reel,

Pines of Saginaw and Saco hewn for masts to meet the keel.

Night and day the roaring forges shape the anchor, weld the chain,

Round the ball, and cast the cannon: O their glows shall not be vain!

Day and night the engines labor, hammers ring and shuttles fly,

Till the avenging fleet is fashioned, Southward set, with colors high.

Homeward come the eager war-ships, scattered wide in foreign seas;

Past the Indies, through the Gulf-way, all their canvas to the breeze!

Right across the sandy shallows, up the channel broad and deep, —

Hark! their cannon's judgment thunder wakes
the traitor city's sleep!

Moated Jackson, strong St. Philip! ye were weak and powerless then;

Low must crumble wall and bastion had ye thrice ten thousand men.

Ye may man your casemates newly, hurl your shot like hellish rain, —

Sweep their shells in fiery circles, strewing all your lines with slain.

O, such ships were never anchored off the Nile or Trafalgar, —

See ! they pass the boom, the fortress, steady, stormed from hull to spar !

O, such men were never marshaled on the deck for siege or slaughter, —

Think how sank the bold Varuna, herofreighted, 'neath the water !

Forts are silenced, fleets are vanquished, shot nor flame can bear them down ;

Now, to God alone be glory ! safe they come before the town.

O, the foe by tent and fireside learned full well what Treason means,

When the cannon, wrathful, deadly, lined the wharves of New Orleans ;

When they heard the rapturous music, caught the crews' victorious cheer,

As again, on dome and fortress, rose the old flag, floating clear ;

Saw the pale, bewildered army flee in terror and dismay :

Now, to God alone be glory, 't was a proud and joyful day !

From St. Louis, down the River, nobly manned, the Gun-boats move ;

Woe to fort and recreant city when they round their prow above !

Ah, what valor seized the islands ! boasting
Memphis gained again !

Wrapt the rebel ships in ruin, wave and flame our allies then !

Mile by mile the restless River from its tyrant rule they free,

Till the fleet that left the prairies hails the fleet that sailed from sea !

“ Patience yet, O greeting sailors ! mark ! Port Hudson, Vicksburg, wait,

Grimly couched on savage highlands, sworn to guard the River-gate.

Call the soldiers from their camp-fires ! man
the guns ! there ’s work to do

Ere this barred and gloomy water you may sail unchallenged through.”

Then beneath the bluffs they anchored, while their armies in the rear

Made the prisoned traitors tremble, slowly, surely, drawing near.

How we waited for the tidings ! “ Will they never yield ? ” we cried ;

“ Must we hold them still beleaguered, hopeless, starving in their pride ? ”

Spring went fruitless down to summer ; 't was the Fourth day of July ;

When, to swell the roar of cannon and the anthem's pealing high,

Sudden flashed the words of triumph, lightning-borne from town to town,

“ Haughty Vicksburg has surrendered ! we have torn their colors down ! ”

And again, in clearest echo, ere the clamorous joy was still,

“ We are masters of Port Hudson, and the River sail at will ! ”

So from Traitor's grasp forever was the Mississippi won ;

Praise the Lord, O shouting People ! round the world the glad news run !

* * * * *

By the wave or in the woodland slumber still,
O Boatmen bold !

Seaward down, through loyal levels, rolls the River as of old !

Rolls the River, swift, resistless, scorning bounds and forts and foes,

Undivided from the Passes to Itasca's lone repose.

Hark ! a murmur of thanksgiving ! all its waves in music flow, —

Ransomed banks lean o'er to listen, — joyous winds harmonious blow !

On its breast in grander plenty through the ages yet unborn,

Still shall float the teeming harvests, — fairest cotton, golden corn ;

Cities gleam and orchards blossom ; woodmen
open to the sun

Leagues of lowland, breadths of forest, where its tribute rivers run,

Till a free and happy people fill the valley rich and wide,

From the springs of great Missouri far to Alleghany's side ;

While above them, all unclouded, done with war and envious jars,

Brighter through the circling ages shine the glorious Stripes and Stars !

Then amid the yellow wheat-fields as they reap
in summer days ;

Heap, when harvest-moons are shining, rustling sheaves of ripened maize ;

Pluck the grapes from purple hill-sides when the vintage crowns the year ;

Grind the cane and house the cotton that has cost no bondman dear ;
Choose untrammelled, righteous rulers, fit the country's name to bear ;
Hear the bells from bluff and prairie through the hush of Sabbath air ; Shall they tell the thrilling story of the twice-won River o'er,
And the Boatman and the Soldier honored be forevermore ; —
In the nation's song and record, freighted prose and wingèd rhyme,
Light canoe and war - ship gliding, hallowed, down the stream of time !

HYMN FOR THE NATION.

O GOD of the Nations! our country we sing;

A fond heart's devotion the tribute we bring;
All trial we welcome, all danger we dare,
For the land that we love and the banner we bear.

Flag of our Fathers! thy stars shall not wane!

Glory attend thee on ocean and shore!
Float o'er the Free from the Gulf to the main;

God shall defend thee till States are no
more!

Fair realm of the river, the prairie, the lake,
What is there we would not resign for thy sake?

Come peace or come peril, O home of our pride!

We 'll live for thee, shield thee, till death shall divide.

For honor, for virtue, for freedom, for God,
We 'll follow the path that our Fathers have trod ;

Right onward, unswerving, till joyful we raise
From ocean to ocean an anthem of praise.

We hail thee, we crown thee, bright Land of the West !

God keep thee, the purest, the noblest, the best,
While all thy domain with a people He fills
As free as thy winds and as firm as thy hills.

Flag of our Fathers ! thy stars shall not wane !

Glory attend thee on ocean and shore !
Float o'er the Free from the Gulf to the
main ;

God shall defend thee till States are no
more !

HARVEST AND LIBERTY.

BEFORE ELECTION, 1860.

THE harvest-moon is waning,
And, under shielding eaves,
The wheat lies threshed and garnered,
Or heaped in heavy sheaves ;
And on a thousand prairies,
Like forest seas outrolled,
The corn stands waiting till the sun
Shall turn its green to gold.

Along the fair Ohio
The grapes are storing wine, —
Catawba, purple Isabel,
And fragrant Muscadine ;
And peach and apple, ripe and red,
Drop when the light winds blow,
Ripe and red from the laden boughs,
Till the grass is heaped below.

Oh, never 'neath Athenian skies
To Ceres, garland-crowned,
When scarlet poppies wreathed with wheat
Her shining tresses bound,
Such glad thanksgivings filled the air,
Such wild and tuneful glee,
As we could bring with shout and song
From prairie-land to sea.

But let us put the sickle by,
Nor mind the golden sheaves,
The purpling grapes upon the vine,
The apples 'mid the leaves.
For you and I and all of us
Have nobler work to-day,
That will not brook a backward look,
Nor bear a feast's delay.

Before the yellow corn is housed,
Or sealed, the amber wine,
A day will come when every man,
Upon a holier shrine,
Such gift may lay as ne'er was borne
From mine or ocean foam
For Delphi's god, or greater Jove
Throned on the hills of Rome.

Not India's gems, nor Persia's pearls,
Nor wood of rarest trees,
Nor spices from the Orient isles
Slow wafted o'er the seas.
Our shrine is Liberty's ; how clear
The wind around it sings !
Our gift, the freeman's priceless vote ;
Our God, the King of kings.

Now who that loves his wife, or child,
Or home, or brother man,
But in the bright, heroic ranks,
That day will swell the van ?
And strong in love and hope and faith,
And treading firm the sod,
Up to the patriot's altar go,
Beneath the eye of God.

Young men ! around whose virgin vote
The proudest thoughts entwine ;
Fathers ! who ne'er again may see
The moon of harvest shine ;
And ye who know the heat of life,
And bear its toil and fray,
O bring your gift, with fervent heart,
To Freedom's shrine that day !

And let it thrill the poet's song,
And be the statesman's care,
And speak from sermon and from hymn,
And yearn in every prayer.
Nay, let it wail in ocean winds,
And flash from out the sun,
And thunder 'mid the mountain peaks,
Until the Work be done !

THE STRIPES AND THE STARS.

APRIL, 1861.

O STAR-SPANGLED Banner! the Flag of our pride!
Though trampled by traitors and basely defied,
Fling out to the glad winds your Red, White,
and Blue,
For the heart of the North-land is beating for you!
And her strong arm is nerving to strike with a will
Till the foe and his boastings are humbled and still!
Here's welcome to wounding and combat and scars
And the glory of death, — for the Stripes and
the Stars!

22 THE STRIPES AND THE STARS.

From prairie, O ploughman, speed boldly away !

There 's seed to be sown in God's furrows today ;

Row landward, lone fisher ! stout woodman,
come home !

Let smith leave his anvil, and weaver his loom,

And hamlet and city ring loud with the cry,
“ For Country, for Freedom, we 'll fight till we die !

Here 's welcome to wounding and combat and
scars

And the glory of death, — for the Stripes and
the Stars ! ”

Invincible Banner ! the Flag of the Free !

Now where are the feet that would falter by thee ?

Or the hands to be folded till triumph is won,
And the eagle looks proud, as of old, to the sun ?

Give tears for the parting, — a murmur of prayer,

Then Forward ! the fame of our standard to share !

With welcome to wounding and combat and scars

And the glory of death, — for the Stripes and
the Stars !

O God of our Fathers ! this Banner must shine
Where battle is hottest, in warfare divine !

The cannon has thundered, the bugle has blown,

We fear not the summons ; we fight not alone !

O lead us, till wide from the Gulf to the Sea
The land shall be sacred to Freedom and Thee !
With love, for oppression ; with blessing, for
scars ;

One Country — one Banner — the Stripes and the Stars !

COMPROMISE.

INSCRIBED TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES
ASSEMBLED IN EXTRA SESSION, JULY 4, 1861.

COMPROMISE! Who dares to speak it
On the nation's hallowed Day,
When the air with thunder echoes
And the rocket-lightnings play?
Compromise? while on the dial
Liberty goes ages back,
Scourged and bound, for our denial,
Firmer to the despot's rack?

Compromise? while angels tremble
As we falter in the race;
Cringe and flatter and dissemble,—
We! who hold such royal place?
Compromise! It suits the craven!
Has our valor stooped so low?
Have we lost our ancient ardor
Face to face to meet the foe?

No ! By all the May-Flower's peril
 On the wild and wintry sea ;
 By the Pilgrim's prayer ascending,
 As he knelt with reverent knee ;
 By that fairest day of summer
 When the true, the tried, the brave,
 Name and life and sacred honor
 To the Roll of Freedom gave ;

By the tears, the march, the battle,
 Where the noble, fearless died, —
 Round them roar of hostile cannon,
 Waiting angels at their side ;
 By our children's golden future,
 By our fathers' stainless shield,
 That which God and heroes left us,
 We will never, never yield !

Hear it, ye who sit in council !
 We, the People, tell you so !
 Will you venture " Yes " to whisper
 When the millions thunder " No " ?
 Will you sell the nation's birthright,
 Heritage of toil and pain,
 While a cry of shame and vengeance
 Rings from Oregon to Maine ?

Compromise ? We scorn the offer !
Separation we defy !
“ Firm and free and one forever ! ”
Thus the People make reply.
“ Death to every form of 'Treason,
In the Senate, on the field,” —
While the chorus swells triumphant,
“ We will never, never yield ! ”

WHO'S READY?

JULY, 1862.

GOD help us! Who's ready? There's danger before!

Who's armed and who's mounted? The foe's at the door!

The smoke of his cannon hangs black o'er the plain;

His shouts ring exultant while counting our slain;

And northward and northward he presses his line:

Who's ready? O, forward! — for yours and for mine!

No halting, no discord; the moments are Fates;

To shame or to glory they open the gates;

There's all we hold dearest to lose or to win;

The web of the future to-day we must spin;

And bid the hours follow, with knell or with chime :

Who 's ready ? O, forward ! — while yet there is time !

Lead armies or councils — be soldier a-field —
Alike, so your valor is Liberty's shield !

Alike, so you strike when the bugle-notes call,
For country, for fireside, for Freedom to all !

The blows of the boldest will carry the day :

Who 's ready ? O, forward ! — there 's death in delay !

Earth's noblest are praying, at home and o'er
sea,

“God keep the great nation united and free !”

Her tyrants watch, eager to leap at our life,

If once we should falter or faint in the strife ;

Our trust is unshaken, though legions assail :

Who 's ready ? O, forward ! — and Right shall prevail !

Who 's ready ? “All ready !” undaunted we cry,

Our hands on our rifles, our hearts beating
high ;

“ No traitor, at midnight, shall pierce us in rest ;

No alien, at noonday, shall stab us abreast ;

The God of our Fathers is guiding us still :

All Forward ! we 're ready, and conquer we will ! ”

BY THE SHENANDOAH.

MY home is drear and still to-night,
Where Shenandoah, murmuring, flows ;
The Blue Ridge towers in the pale moonlight,
And balmily the south wind blows ;
But my fire burns dim, while athwart the wall,
Black as the pines, the shadows fall ;
And the only friend within my door
Is the sleeping hound on the moonlit floor.

Roll back, O weary years ! and bring
Again the gay and cloudless morn
When every bird was on the wing,
And my blithe, summer boys were born !
My Courtney fair, my Philip bold,
With his laughing eyes and his locks of gold, —
No nested bird in the valley wide
Sang as my heart, that eventide.

Our laurels blush when May-winds call ;
Our pines shoot high through mellow showers :

So rosy-flushed, so slender-tall,

My boys grew up from childhood's hours.

Glad in the breeze, the sun, the rain,

They climbed the heights or they roamed the plain ;

And found where the fox lay hid at noon,

And the shy fawn drank by the rising moon.

Fleet Storm, look up ! you ne'er may hear,

When all the dewy glades are still,

In silver windings, fine and clear,

Their whistle stealing o'er the hill !

And fly to the shade where the wild deer rest,

Ere morn has reddened the mountain's crest ;

Nor sit at their feet, when the chase is o'er,

And the antlers hang by the sunset-door.

What drew our hunters from the hills ?

They heard the hostile trumpets blow,

And leapt adown like April rills

When Shenandoah roars below.

One, to the field where the old flag shines,

And one, alas ! to the traitor lines !

My tears — their fond arms round me thrown —

And the house was hushed and the hill-side lone.

But oh ! to feel my boys were foes

Was sharper than their sabres' steel !
In every shifting cloud that rose

I saw their deadly squadrons wheel ;
And heard in the waves, as they hurried by,
Their hasty tread when the fight was nigh,
And, deep in the wail which the night-winds bore,
Their dying moan when the fight was o'er.

So time went on.— The skies were blue ;

Our wheat-fields yellow in the sun ;
When down the vale a rider flew :

“ Ho ! neighbors, Gettysburg is won !
Horse and foot, at the cannon's mouth
We hurled them back to the hungry South ;
The North is safe ; and the vile marauder
Curses the hour he crossed the border.”

My boys were there ! I nearer prest, —

“ And Philip, Courtney, what of them ? ”
His voice dropped low : “ O, madam, rest
Falls sweet when battle's tide we stem.
Your Philip was first of the brave that day
With his colors grasped as in death he lay ;

And Courtney — well, I only knew
Not a man was left of his rebel crew.”

* * * * *

My home is drear and still to-night
Where Shenandoah, murmuring, flows ;
The Blue Ridge towers in the pale moonlight,
And balmily the south wind blows ;
But my fire burns dim, while athwart the wall,
Black as the pines, the shadows fall ;
And the only friend within my door
Is the sleeping hound on the moonlit floor.

Yet still in dreams my boys I own ;
They chase the deer o'er dewy hills,
Their hair by mountain winds is blown,
Their shout the echoing valley fills.
Wafts from the woodland, spring sunshine
Come as they open this door of mine,
And I hear them sing by the evening blaze
The songs they sang in the vanished days.

I cannot part their lives and say,
“ This was the traitor, this the true ; ”
God only knows why one should stray,
And one go pure death's portals through

They have passed from their mother's clasp and care ;
But my heart ascends in the yearning prayer
That His larger love will the two enfold, —
My Courtney fair and my Philip bold !

THE HUNDRED DAYS' MEN.

In the busiest season of the spring of 1864, the States of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois pledged to the Government of the United States one hundred thousand men for a hundred days.

TIS time the corn was planted, the latest wheat was sown, —
The oriole is in the elm, the last swan northward flown ;
By streams the cottonwood is green, the plum
waves white as snow,
The wild-crab blushes in the woods, the red-bud
soon will blow ;
And to the fenceless pastures, whose grass grows sweet and tall,
Slow move the herds, to feed at will till autumn frosts shall fall.
O for the arms so sturdy, O for the tireless feet,
That shared our toil when other Mays brought summer bloom and heat !

But proud we spared our manliest to face the country's foe ;
To march when word comes, " Forward ! " to ride when bugles blow :
Now calm they sleep, by plain and hill, wrapped in their army-blue,
Or bear our banners bravely on, — and will, till wars are through !

And still there 's peril. Fife and drum thrill every village now,
And quickly down the grain is flung and idle stands the plough.
O eager youth ! O earnest men ! your steps
we will not stay ;
There 's nobler need, there 's weightier work ;
haste to the camp away !
We 'll bear the double burden, and blithely plant and sow,
That tent and town and lonely roof no fear of want may know.
And when come round the reaping-days and lingering moonlight-eves,
In cheerful households, young and old, we 'll
bind the ripened sheaves ;
The girls shall pluck the golden ears, the happy children glean,

And thus we 'll bring the harvest home, with many a song between,
And praise to God that sheaves nor sons we prized, the Land before,
But joyfully, in busy May, gave up our thousands more !

KEARSARGE.

Kearsarge, the mountain which gave its name to the ship that sunk the Alabama, is a noble granite peak in Merrimac County, New Hampshire, rising alone, three thousand feet above the sea.

O LIFT thy head, thou mountain lone,
And mate thee with the sun !
Thy rosy clouds are valeward blown,
Thy stars that near at midnight shone
Gone heavenward one by one,
And half of earth, and half of air,
Thou risest vast and gray and bare

And crowned with glory. Far south-west
Monadnoc sinks to see,
For all its trees and towering crest
And clear Contoocook from its breast
Poured down for wood and lea,

How statelier still, through frost and dew,
Thy granite cleaves the distant blue.

And high to north, from fainter sky,
 Franconia's cliffs look down ;
Home to their crags the eagles fly,
Deep in their caves the echoes die,
 The sparkling waters frown,
And the Great Face that guards the glen Pales with the pride of mortal men.

Nay, from their silent, crystal seat
 The White Hills scan the plain ;
Nor Saco's leaping, lightsome feet,
Nor Amonoosuc wild to greet
 The meadows and the main,
Nor snows nor thunders can atone
For splendor thou hast made thine own.

For thou hast joined the immortal band
 Of hills and streams and plains,
Shrined in the songs of native land, —
Linked with the deeds of valor grand
 Told when the bright day wanes, —
Part of the nation's life art thou,
O mountain of the granite brow !

Not Pelion when the Argo rose,
 Grace of its goodliest trees ;
Nor Norway hills when woodman's blows
Their pines sent crashing through the snows
 That kings might rove the seas ;
Nor heights that gave the Armada's line,
Thrilled with a joy as pure as thine.

Bold was the ship thy name that bore ;
 Strength of the hills was hers ;
Heart of the oaks thy pastures store,
The pines that hear the north wind roar,
 The dark and tapering firs ;
Nor Argonaut nor Viking knew
Sublimar daring than her crew.

And long as Freedom fires the soul
 Or mountains pierce the air,
Her fame shall shine on honor's scroll ;
Thy brow shall be the pilgrim's goal
 Uplifted broad and fair ;
And, from thy skies, inspiring gales
O'er future seas shall sweep our sails.

Still summer keep thy pastures green,
 And clothe thy oaks and pines ;

Brooks laugh thy rifted rocks between ;
Snows fall serenely o'er the scene
And veil thy lofty lines ;
While crowned and peerless thou dost stand,
The monarch of our mountain-land.

AT HOME.

AN INCIDENT IN THE RETURN OF THE NEW HAMPSHIRE TROOPS.

NOW, Charley, on the knapsacks you'll find an easy bed ;
Our blankets we have folded and smooth above them spread.
The train will soon be starting, — here, drink
this cup of wine,
The captain just now sent it, — and, ere the morning shine,
Away by blue Monadnoc, and where the hill-
brooks foam,
You will be done with travel and rest in peace
at home."

"O boys you're very good to me ; I feel so tired and weak,
That, though I love to listen, I scarce can bear to speak.

But I'm surely growing better, and if, at early dawn,
I see our blue Monadnoc my pain will all be gone ;
And when I hear my mother's voice, and sit within the door
That opens by the brook-side, I shall be strong once more.

“ How much I have to tell her ! My letters were not long ;
I could not write while on the march nor in the camp-fire's throng ;
But, when I sit beside her, how sweet 't will be to say,
' Now, mother, list the story of what befell that
day ; '
O she shall hear of every fight, and count each weary mile
I've trod, since faint through silent tears I saw her parting smile !

“ Good night, boys ! I shall sleep now. What joy it is to feel
We're drawing nearer, nearer home with each revolving wheel !

Good night ! At dawn you 'll wake me when round the bend we go,
For there, beside the station, my mother 'll
 wait, I know ;
And if she does not see me the first to leave
 the train,
She 'll think upon some nameless field her boy
 at last was slain."

Slow turned away his comrades to snatch an hour's repose,
Or talk of siege and battle while clear the moon uprose ;
But when the swift train halted, back to his side they crept,
And saw that on his narrow couch all peacefully he slept :
So night wore on to morning, and day began to dye
With floating rose and amber, the mellow eastern sky.

A league and then the station. " Ho !
 Charley ! " blithe they call,
" Here looms the mountain ; yonder the church-spire rises tall ; "

No sound: they bend above him; his brow is cold and white;
He does not heed their voices, he stirs not for the light;
Away by blue Monadnoc, and where the hill-
brooks foam,
The boy was done with travel; the soldier had gone home.

THE GRAVE OF LINCOLN.

NOW must the storied Potomac
Laurels forever divide ;
Now to the Sangamon fameless
Give of its century's pride.
Sangamon, stream of the prairies,
Placidly westward that flows,
Far in whose city of silence
Calm he has sought his repose.
Over our Washington's river
Sunrise beams rosy and fair ;
Sunset on Sangamon fairer, —
Father and martyr lies there.

Kings under pyramids slumber,
Sealed in the Lybian sands ;
Princes in gorgeous cathedrals,
Decked with the spoil of the lands ;
Kinglier, princelier sleeps he,
Couched 'mid the prairies serene,

Only the turf and the willow
Him and God's heaven between ;
Temple nor column to cumber
Verdure and bloom of the sod, —
So in the vale by Beth-peor
Moses was buried of God.

Break into blossom, O prairies !
Snowy and golden and red ;
Peers of the Palestine lilies
Heap for your Glorious Dead !
Roses as fair as of Sharon,
Branches as stately as palm,
Odors as rich as the spices —
Cassia and aloes and balm —
Mary the loved and Salome,
All with a gracious accord,
Ere the first glow of the morning
Brought to the tomb of the Lord.

Wind of the West ! breathe around him
Soft as the saddened air's sigh,
When to the summit of Pisgah
Moses had journeyed to die ;
Clear as its anthem that floated
Wide o'er the Moabite plain,

Low with the wail of the people
Blending its burdened refrain.
Rarer, O wind ! and diviner, —
Sweet as the breeze that went by,
When, over Olivet's mountain,
Jesus was lost in the sky.

Not for thy sheaves nor savannas
Crown we thee, proud Illinois !
Here in his grave is thy grandeur ;
Born of his sorrow thy joy.
Only the tomb by Mount Zion,
Hewn for the Lord, do we hold
Dearer than his in thy prairies,
Girdled with harvests of gold !
Still for the world through the ages
Wreathing with glory his brow,
He shall be liberty's Saviour ;
Freedom's Jerusalem thou !

HEROES.

THE winds that once the Argo bore
Have died by Neptune's ruined shrines,
And her hull is the drift of the deep sea-floor,
Though shaped of Pelion's tallest pines.
You may seek her crew on every isle
Fair in the foam of Ægean seas,
But, out of their rest, no charm can wile
Jason and Orpheus and Hercules.

And Priam's wail is heard no more
By windy Ilion's sea-built walls ;
Nor great Achilles, stained with gore,
Shouts, " O ye Gods ! 't is Hector falls ! "
On Ida's mount is the shining snow,
But Jove has gone from its brow away,
And red on the plain the poppies grow
Where the Greek and the Trojan fought that day.

Mother Earth ! Are the Heroes dead ?
Do they thrill the soul of the years no more ?

Are the gleaming snows and the poppies red
All that is left of the brave of yore ?
Are there none to fight as Theseus fought
Far in the young world's misty dawn ?
Or to teach as the gray-haired Nestor taught ?
Mother Earth ! are the Heroes gone ?

Gone ? In a grander form they rise ;
Dead ? We may clasp their hands in ours ;
And catch the light of their clearer eyes,
And wreath their brows with immortal flowers.

Wherever a noble deed is done
'T is the pulse of a Hero's heart is stirred ;
Wherever Right has a triumph won
There are the Heroes' voices heard.

Their armor rings on a fairer field
Than the Greek and the Trojan fiercely
trod ;
For Freedom's sword is the blade they wield,
And the light above is the smile of God.
So, in his isle of calm delight,
Jason may sleep the years away ;
For the Heroes live, and the sky is bright,
And the world is a braver world to-day.

THE VIRGINIA SCAFFOLD.

DECEMBER 2, 1859, THE DAY OF JOHN BROWN'S EXECUTION.

REAR on high the scaffold-altar ! all the world will turn to see How a man has dared to suffer that his brothers may be free !
Rear it on some hill-side looking North and South and East and West,
Where the wind from every quarter fresh may blow upon his breast,
And the sun look down unshaded from the chill
December sky,
Glad to shine upon the hero who for Freedom dared to die !

All the world will turn to see him ; — from the pines of wave-washed Maine
To the golden rivers rolling over California's plain,
And from clear Superior's waters, where the wild swan loves to sail,

To the Gulf-lands, summer-bosomed, fanned by ocean's softest gale, —
Every heart will beat the faster in its sorrow or its scorn,
For the man nor courts nor prisons can annoy,
another morn !
And from distant climes and nations men shall Westward gaze and say,
“ He who periled all for Freedom on the scaffold dies to-day.”

Never offering was richer nor did temple fairer rise
For the gods serenely smiling from the blue
Olympian skies ;
Porphyry or granite column did not statelier
cleave the air
Than the posts of yonder gallows with the cross-beam waiting there ;
And the victim, wreathed and crownèd, not for Dian nor for Jove,
But for Liberty and Manhood, comes, the sacrifice of Love.

They may hang him on the gibbet ; they may raise the victor's cry

When they see him darkly swinging like a speck against the sky ;

Ah ! the dying of a hero that the right may win its way,

Is but sowing seed for harvest in a warm and mellow May !

Now his story shall be whispered by the firelight's evening glow,

And in fields of rice and cotton when the hot noon passes slow,

Till his name shall be a watchword from Missouri to the sea,

And his planting find its reaping in the birthday of the Free !

Christ, the crucified, attend him ! Weak and erring though he be,

In his measure he has striven, suffering Lord !
to love like Thee !

Thou the vine, — Thy friends the branches, — is he not a branch of Thine,

Though some dregs from earthly vintage have defiled the heavenly wine ?

Now his tendrils lie unclaspèd, bruised, and prostrate on the sod, —

Take him to Thine upper garden where the husbandman is God !

THE WHITE SLAVES.

WRITTEN IN 1860, AFTER SEEING A WHITE SLAVE CHILD PURCHASED AND MADE FREE IN PLYMOUTH CHURCH, BROOKLYN.

THE household of a Roman, in Rome's luxurious time,
Was filled with slaves in waiting from every conquered clime.
There were dreamy-eyed Egyptians, born where the lotus blows,
And Syrians won from Lebanon, fair as its sunset glows,
And dancing-girls from Cadiz to while the hours with song,
And dark Numidian beauties, the bronzes of the throng,
And light-haired Scythians that pined beneath his palace dome,
And stately Carthaginian maids who would not smile in Rome !

These were their master's chattels, and humbly watched his ways,
And kept his house, and swelled his train, and graced his festal days ;
But should the princely Roman forget his high disdain,
And love the maid of Carthage or the singing-girl of Spain,
And did she bear him children, wait till his death should be,
And she and they, by Roman Law, were made forever free.

Alas ! our later lordlings this partial justice scorn ;
Their hapless children find a night that never knows a morn !
Slaves while their sire is living, and slaves
when he is dead ;
No law denies the market the proud Caucasian head ;
But, hurried to the auction, the youth and maid are sold
To save the lands for legal heirs and fill their palms with gold ;

And the ampler is the forehead and the clearer
 is the skin,
The sharper grows the contest and the louder swells the din.
In Rome the sire's patrician blood release and honor gave, —
With us it only firmer clasps the fetters of the slave.

And evermore they cry to us in yearning and despair,
To open Freedom's blessed gate and let them
 breathe its air !
The crescent moon has hardly filled since a fair child of nine,
Her brow just tinted by the land where warmer
 sunbeams shine,
With her small mouth all tremulous, and eyelids
 wet with tears,
And cheek now crimson and now pale with changing hopes and fears, Stood by the church's altar, — 't is there such prayers belong, —
And asked her life and womanhood of the great, pitying throng.

Right largely did they answer, and listening angels bore,
Back to our Lord in heaven one burning story
more.

Up the volcano's sloping sides the oak and chestnut climb,
And vineyards smile and orchards wave as floats the vesper chime.
'Tis just before the thunder-burst, but the wide heaven is still
As when an Indian-summer noon lies sleeping on the hill ;
A roar — a crash — a fiery hell shot through the quivering sky,
And oak and vine and orchard bloom in blackened ruin lie !
Beneath us a volcano heaves of more portentous name,
And millions, waiting wearily, in silence feed
its flame ;
No smoke rolls from the crater, nor hot winds round it blow,
But, deep within its throbbing heart, the fires
are all aglow ;

Woe to the land that circles it when the wild moment falls,
And the long-smothered fury bursts from out its prison walls !

Now let us wake from sleep and ease before the fatal day,
Nor dream such grief and wrong can die in voiceless calm away ;
For surely as the mountain stream leaps down
 to find the sea,
This high-born race, through love or hate, must hasten to be free.
Oh, louder, grander, till the words like trumpet-charges call,
Let every soul cry, “ Liberty ! ” and “ Liberty for all ! ”

THE SLAVE SALE.

On Wednesday and Thursday of the first week of March, 1859, four hundred and twenty-nine slaves, men, women, and children, the property of Mr. Pierce M. Butler, were sold at auction, at the Race-course, Savannah, Geo., to pay the debts of their master. None of the Butler slaves had ever been sold before. This sale had been largely advertised, and buyers were present from all the Southern States. When it was over, Mr. Butler presented each slave with a silver dollar.

WHO would not be in Savannah to-day?
Out by the Race-course, — there is the Play, —
Tragedies, comedies, all together
Shaking hands in the wild March weather.
There are hundreds of actors, the programmes tell,
And some, at each scene, are to say farewell;
Trust me, 't will be a marvellous Play,
For this is Pierce Butler's "Benefit" day.

Mark them. See with what eager eyes
They watch and wait till the curtain rise:

Some from the rice-fields broad and green
That stretch the swamp and the shore between ;
And some from St. Simon's Isle, that lies
A league away where the land-breeze dies, —
St. Simon's Isle where the sea-wave flows,
And the fairest and finest cotton grows.
Parents and children, every one,
Have toiled for others since life begun ;
But then each man at his cabin door
Could sit in peace when his work was o'er,
And the same roof covered them all, though slaves,
And the same moon rose on their fathers'
 graves,
And they laughed and sung and hoped to rest
One day in the soil which their young feet prest.

What does it mean that they tremble here,
Waiting the call of the auctioneer ?
What does it mean ! 'T is a common tale, —
Their master's funds were about to fail ;
Mister Pierce Butler has debts to pay,
And this, good friends, is the only way.
Generous souls ! For his lordly sake
They ought to be willing their hearts should break.

And rejoice to be anywhere, anyhow sold,
To fill his coffers with needful gold !
For what is the grief of such as these
Compared to a gentleman's moneyed ease ?
And then, when the little arrangement's made,
And he feels quite sure 't was a gaining trade,
He'll give them a dollar ! — that will heal
*Every sorrow a slave can feel.
Scores for the master and one for his tool, —
Thus he'll follow the Golden Rule
That reads, " To others I'll do what I see
Will bring the most money to mine and me."

Eleven o'clock and the sale begins, —
Now the best man is the man who wins
Hand and brain at the lowest price
For his fields of cotton and cane and rice.
Buyers are there from the far Southwest
To the Georgian isles on the ocean's breast,
And from Florida jungles, gay with vines,
North to the woods of the Carolines ;
And higher and higher the bidding goes,
And wilder, without, the March wind blows,
As one and another, faint with fear,
Are led to the block their doom to hear.
There is Elisha with children and wife,
O how anxiously watching the strife !

A mild-faced man in the crowd they spy, —
Can he not, will he not all of them buy ?
And he weeps and pleads, but the man denies,
For he sees where a closer bargain lies,
And their courage sinks and their tears come fast ;

But what of this ? When the sale is past
They 'll have a dollar ! and that will heal
Every sorrow a slave can feel.
Scores for the master and one for his tool, —
Thus is followed the Golden Rule
That reads, “ To others I 'll do what I see
Will bring the most money to mine and me.”

The wind blew strong and the rain was cold,
And Daphney's babe was but two weeks old,
And to shield them both from the driving storm

A shawl is over her trembling form :
“ Off with it ! ” “ What is the matter ? ” they shout,

And the jest and the oath are passed about
Till she droops and shivers and wonders why
It was not hers and her child's to die.
But what of this ? When the sale is done,
And the papers are signed and the profits won,

She 'll have a dollar ! and that will heal
Every sorrow a slave can feel.
Scores for the master and one for his tool, —
Thus is followed the Golden Rule
That reads, “ To others I 'll do what I see
Will bring the most money to mine and me.”

Jeffrey has neither father nor mother,
But Jeffrey and Dorcas love each other
With a love that never can change or fail,
And he tells his master the simple tale,
And begs him to buy her with earnest tone, —
But Dorcas cannot be sold alone ;
He goes to the swamp-lands, drearily parted,
And she to the cotton-fields, broken-hearted !
But what of this ? 'T is a trifling thing ;
Did they not excellent prices bring ?
Give them a dollar ! — that will heal
Every sorrow a slave can feel.
Scores for the master and one for his tool, —
Thus is followed the Golden Rule
That reads, “ To others I 'll do what I see
Will bring the most money to mine and me.”

Sadly they follow them, one and all,
Till none are left in the farthest stall.

The Play is over ; the farewells said ;
The curtain dropped and the actors fled ;
And the stars shine out, and the breeze goes by,
Sweet with the bloom of the fruit-trees nigh.
A hundred cabins are dark and still,
And the wind and the moonlight may work their will,

For those who sat by the open door
Will never return to their shelter more,
Nor dance on the lawn when day is past,
Nor sleep by their fathers' graves at last.
But this is nothing ; their master paid
For all the ruin and wreck he made ;
Each had a dollar ! and that will heal
Every sorrow a slave can feel.
Scores for the master and one for his tool, —
Thus he followed the Golden Rule
That reads, “ To others I'll do what I see
Will bring the most money to mine and me.”

God of the Weak and the Poor ! how long Shall their cries be drowned in the victor's song,
And body and brain and heart be sold
For the white man's ease and the white man's gold ?

Hast Thou not heard them ? Dost Thou not say

There shall come, at the last, a grander Play,
When Thy searching eye shall the actors see,
And Love the coin of the realm shall be ?

Woe to those who 've but gold that day
When vengeance is Thine, and Thou wilt repay !

FOR FREEDOM!

RESPONSE OF THE COLORED SOLDIERS TO THE CALL OF
THE PRESIDENT, JANUARY, 1864.

THANK God! 'Tis the war-cry! They call us; we come;
Clear summons the bugle, bold beckons the drum;
Our "Ready!" rings clearer; our hearts bolder beat
As under the bright flag rejoicing we meet,
For still we have trusted through darkest delay,
That the flash of these guns would be dawn of our day.

'Tis dawning! 'tis morning! the hills are aglow!
God's angels roll backward the clouds of our woe!
One grasp of the rifle, one glimpse of the fray,
And chattel and bondman have vanished for aye;

Stern men they will find us who venture to feel
The shock of our cannon, the thrust of our steel.

And then, when the fierce day is done, in the gleam
Of the camp-fire at midnight, how gayly we 'll dream ! —

The slave is the citizen, coveted name !
That lifts him from loathing, that shields him from shame ;
His cottage unravished, and, blithesome as he,
His wife by the hearthstone, his babe on her knee.

The cotton grows fair by the sea as of old ;
The cane yields its sugar, the orange its gold ;
Light rustle the corn-leaves, the rice-fields are green,

And, free as the white man, he smiles on the scene ; —

The drum beats ; we start from our slumbers and pray
That the dream of the night find an answering
day.

To God be the glory ! They call us ; we come ;
How welcome the watchword, the hurry, the hum ;
Our hearts are on fire as our good swords we bare,
“ For Freedom ! for Freedom ! ” soft echoes
 the air ;
The bugles ring cheerly ; our banners float
 high ;
O comrades, strike boldly ! our triumph is nigh !

CHIMES OF NOON.

NOON by God's unerring dial, — highest noon of earth and time, —

Through the great cathedral heavens, hark !
the chimes peal out sublime !

Chimes that marked the rounding ages, ever grander in their play,

Ring clear when Right was victor, up through all the morning gray ;

Now they blend and rise triumphant, — blessed
Bells ! how sweet your singing !

'T is the chorus of the ages, — 't is the noonday chimes are ringing !

God be praised ! we softly echo, as the wondrous music swells,

Swaying all the warm tides hidden deep in feeling's holy wells ;

God be praised ! it is the singing earth has yearned so long to hear

Stealing through the tumult, bringing promise of the nobler year !

“Liberty for every creature !” — thus the mellow measures flow, — “Liberty and Love and Honor !” chant the bells serene and slow.

Fainter now — the peans falter — while a wailing, alien strain,
Winding through its mournful minor, thrills
the air with sudden pain ;
List ! the happy voices drown it, — sorrow shall not mar the boon
Of the bells that high and cheerly sound the glorious airs of Noon !
“Liberty the wide earth over !” — still the measures rise and fall, — “God, the Father — Man, the Brother — so an end of scorn and thrall.”

Chimes celestial ! we are drifting by your calm, melodious tune,
Out of cloudy, misty morning into sunlit afternoon.
There are seas for wary sailing, there are mountains steep to climb,
Ere we gain the placid regions of the world’s millennial prime ;

Still the rage and roar of battle, still the pride and power of wrong,
Yet our labor shall be lighter, hearing sweet your prophet-song.

From the Future, while we listen, fades the filmy veil away,

Broad the sunset glory brightens, burns to greet the Eternal Day!

Vanish earth's despairing shadows, — o'er her plains what splendors shine!

Drained, the brimming cup of vengeance, now
she quaffs divinest wine!

Clearer, sweeter chimes are rising as in radiance melts the sun, —

'T is the welcome of the angels. Alleluiah!
Heaven is won!

MISCELLANEOUS POEMS.

To the minstrel said the king,
“ Sing you mournful songs or glad ? ”
“ Nay, sire, 't is of life I sing ;
Gay to-day, to-morrow sad.”

“ Minstrel, tell us not of tears ;
Dulcet notes to joy belong.”
“ Nay, sire, he who sorrow fears
Will not hear the sweetest song.”

CONSUMMATION.

„Ich habe genossen das irdische Glück,
Ich habe gelebt und geliebet!“

Thetla's Song.

UT of dreams, in the midnight gloom,
I wake and the wind blows over the
sea ;

It has heard the storm and the thunder boom,
And the petrel cry, on its way to me.

Through the lattice it sighs and swells,
But my heart is so light and glad and gay,
That it comes like the music of fairy bells,
Rung in the green wood, far away ;

Sweet as the carol the children sing
When lover and bride from the altar go,
And under the shadow the lindens fling,
Enter their door in the sunset glow.

Still, to-night, from the starless sky
Will fall the white frost's glittering sheen,
And faint in its chill embrace will lie
Bud and blossom and mossy green.

Dead they will droop in the pallid noon,
But I shall not weep for their sweetness fled,
For hid in my heart's immortal June
Is a flower unfolding, glorious red.
Moan, O wind of the stormy deep !
'T is the breeze from the Isles of the Blest
I hear ;
Sink, fair blooms, to your wintry sleep !
There 's a fairer waiting to crown the year.

When the rose has opened, the nightingale cares
No more for the paler buds that blow ;
When the pearl is the prize which the diver
bears,
The sea may sleep in its depths below.
Love is the rose earth's bowers enshrine,
And the gleaming pearl of the caverned
sea ;
Now the rose and the pearl are mine, are mine,
And what is the land or the wave to me ?
Death may come in the morning glow,
Or under the sunset's amber shine, —
I shall say, " Welcome ! I wait to go,
For the rose and the pearl are mine, are mine ! "

CLOUDS.

WHAT Alps of clouds ! The distant, airy deep
Is broken up, and fleecy mountains tower,
Pile over pile, and drift across the blue,
Wild driven by the warm, fierce wind that blows
From fiery Mars ; while through their rents and chasms
Shines the pure ether of the outer realm,
And links the lone earth to her sister spheres.
Glorious ! The Universe is mine the while !
Fleet Mercury, companion of the sun,
And far Uranus with his loitering years,
And all the myriad, myriad worlds that roll
Beyond our vision dim, but seen of God,
And heard in symphonies about His throne.
And if, above the splendor of these cliffs,
Some white-winged angel should this moment poise,

And in a voice of luring sweetness sing,
“ Come hither, hither with the seraphim ! ”
I should as lightly follow as the child,
Who, tired of silent books and narrow walls,
Hears from the garden bowers his mother call,
And bounds to meet her, knowing they shall roam
Through leafy woodlands and by singing streams.

Are not the heavens God's pastures of delight,
Whither He leads us when our tasks are done ?
Give placid, brooding skies to Time and Love,
Fond human love that nestles in the vale
And shuns the wide horizon and the storm ;
But, for Immortal Birth, a sky like this,
Upheaved, tumultuous, with a rushing wind
Swept from the farthest circle of the stars
To bear the rapt, exultant soul away !

Or such an evening as I saw in June :
All day the rain had fallen, but the clouds
Lifted at twilight, and to eastward rolled ;
And, from wet woods and fields, a silver mist
Rose silently, half zenith high, and robed
The near horizon, mountains, meadows, groves,
In the soft lustre of its filmy veil,

So light, so thin, that through its shroud the pines

Loomed darkly, like the ghost of Loda seen
By moonlight on the hills of Inistore.

When, lo ! above the still expanse, a cloud
Lit by the beams of the departed sun !

A ship of flame with crimson sails and masts
All fiery bright, God's glowing galleon,
Celestial freighted for some Eden shore.

And ravished, breathless, fain I would have cried,

“Ho ! tarry ! hither turn thy gleaming prow,
And take my soul across the silver sea !”

Or an October sunset in the hills :

The west was banked with clouds ; the sun obscured ;

When, suddenly, just on the horizon's verge,
He burst forth in farewell. O wondrous change !

The south was sapphire through a filmy haze ;
The north, the clear, pale, emerald green of waves

That break in foam upon a shelving shore ;
The dull, gray bars were palace-pillars tall,
Of gorgeous marbles, jasper, porphyry,

And flawless, blushing granite such as floats,
From far Syene quarries down the Nile.
And domes of purest gold above them shone,
And towers with many a banner burning high, —
Purple and scarlet on an amber sheen, —
While walls of topaz and great rubies blazed,
As flashed the sun or blew the shifting breeze
O'er the wide courts and through the columned aisles.
Nay, 't was no earthly palace, but the Bride, —
The New Jerusalem from God come down, —
And I had but to cross the close-reapt fields,
And pass the brook and gain the mountain's brow,
To swing the gate of pearl and enter in,
Forever done with death and pain and tears !

THY PSYCHE.

LIKE a strain of wondrous music rising up
 in cloister dim,
 Through my life's unwritten measures thou dost steal, a glorious hymn !
 All the joys of earth and heaven in the singing meet and flow,
 Richer, sweeter for the wailing of an undertone
 of woe ;
 How I linger, how I listen for each mellow note that falls,
 Clear as chime of angels floating downward o'er the jasper walls.

Every night when winds are moaning round
 my chamber by the sea,
 Thine 's the face that, through the darkness,
 latest looks with love at me ;
 And I dream, ere thou departest thou dost press thy lips to mine, —

Then I sleep as slept the immortals after draughts of Hebe's wine !

As the young Endymion slumbered in a moonlight trance of bliss,

When, on lonely Latmos lying, Dian stooped his lips to kiss !

'T was thy soul-wife, 't was thy Psyche, one uplifted, heavenly day

Thou didst call me, — how divinely on thy brow love's glory lay !

Thou, my Cupid, — not the boy-god whom the Thespians did adore,

But the man so large, so noble, truer god than Venus bore.

I, thy Psyche, — yet what blackness in this thread of gold is wove ;

Thou canst never, never lead me proud before the throne of Jove !

All the gods might strive to help thee through the longest summer day ;

Still would watch the fatal Sisters spinning in the twilight gray,

And their calm and silent faces, changeless,
looking through the gloom,

From eternity would answer, " Thou canst ne'er escape thy doom."

Couldst thou claim me, couldst thou clasp me,
 'neath the blue Elysian skies,
 Then what music and what odor through their azure depths would rise !
 Roses all the Hours would scatter ; every god would bring us joy ;
 So, in perfect loving blended, bliss would never know alloy.

O my heart ! the vision changes ; fades the soft, celestial blue ;
 Dies away the rapturous music, thrilling all my pulses through ;
 Lone I sit within my chamber, storms are beating 'gainst the pane,
 And my tears are falling faster than the chill
 December rain, —
 Yet, though I am doomed to linger, joyless, on this earthly shore,
 Thou art Cupid, I am Psyche, we are wedded evermore.

THE WELCOME SLEEP.

"Ibi pax erit perennis Et lætitia solennis."

DAY by day, when the clear wind blows,
Sad, by the door, the old man goes,
With his cautious step and his thin, white hair
Lightly tossed by the wanton air.
Slowly down the street he walks,
And sometimes low to himself he talks
Of the mother's voice and the childhood times,
The daisied fields and the Sabbath chimes,
And the wife and the baby gone to rest
Long ago, in the green earth's breast.
Then on his staff he leans, to mark
The ships come over the harbor bar,
And dimly dreams each wandering bark
Has sailed from the land where the loved ones are.
The blank sun stares in his faded eye ;
He sees the fleet gulls seaward fly ;

And the mists of the ocean melt in air,
Like the hopes that have vanished, fleet and fair.

“ Rest, O Father ! ” I hear him say, —
“ When will the evening end the day,
And the tired have blessed leave to creep
Under the cool and quiet sod,
Into the sleep so long and deep
That falls on the weary eyes from God ? ”

A maiden, by the old man's side,
Looks tenderly across the sea ;
The wind, from off the waters wide,
Sweeps the gulls in snowy whirls,
And backward blows her chestnut curls,
As in a dream leans she,
Poised on her slender foot, to mark
The ships sail homeward o'er the bar,
And think how soon will rise the bark
That bears her love from isles afar.
And all the joy of bride and wife
Comes, timid, in her face to shine,
As low she cries, “ How sweet is life !
O Wind ! I drink your breath like wine ;
For I know you waft, o'er the foaming sea,
In sun and in tempest, my love to me ! ”

Alas ! This welcome, wooing breeze
That wings her thoughts as the white gulls soar,
Deep 'mid the reefs of the coral seas
Has whelmed that bark and the souls it bore.
Through the rosy morns and the twilights pale
She will sigh for the gleam of the vanished sail,
And the form that lies where the sea-flowers twine
Rocked by the swell of the heaving brine, —
Till hope is dead, and her white lips say,
“ When will the evening end the day,
And the tired have blessed leave to creep
Under the cool and quiet sod,
Into the sleep so long and deep
That falls on the weary eyes from God ? ”

Ah ! we are all like the maiden fair,
Or the faint old man with the silver hair !
We have seen the buds of the spring decay,
And the gold of the morning turn to gray ;
Or, off some harbor, with eager eyes
We watch for a bark that will never rise,
Thrilled with joy at the flattering breath
That has borne our all to the gulfs of death !
And, early or late, we, too, shall say,

“ When will the evening end the day,
And the tired have blessed leave to creep
 Under the cool and quiet sod,
Into the sleep so long and deep
 That falls on the weary eyes from God ? ”

INDIAN SUMMER.

TIS Indian Summer's richest, latest day ;
The skies are bending down, serenely blue ;
And, to the south wind's sigh, the branches sway

With answering music as they lightly strew
Upon the ground beneath, the gorgeous leaves
Of russet-green and ruby-red and gold,
So bright, my heart, sad as the south wind, grieves

To see their glories sinking in the mould !
And every gay and gladsome thing seems taking

A lingering leave of grove and field and sky ;
Birds, all the glens and forest aisles forsaking,
In croft and orchard sweet lament are making
For roses dead and loveless winter nigh.
The bees are hovering o'er the lonely flowers,
The gift of mild September's sunny hours, —

Pale asters that have lived through frosty eves,
And still in languid beauty tint their leaves
Amid the mountain fern, that yet retains Its fragrant breath through all the autumnal rains,

And meek immortelles that, till snows appear,
Will mourn the buried splendors of the year ;
While squirrels haste with nuts and acorns brown

That every waft above the wood brings down ;
And, on the wing, a golden butterfly,
The last, the loveliest, is flitting by.
So calm ! so fair ! yet well I know at morn Wild winds will blow till all the groves are shorn,

And soft mists vanish and the mountains rise
Cold and severe in melancholy skies.
Now fades the sun from hill and stream and dell, —

O mellow Indian Summer ! fare thee well !

"THE PRAYER IN THE DESERT."

PAINTED BY GEROME.

UPON his cloak the Arab stands ;
 Behind him stretch the solemn sands
 Back to the barren hills that lie
 Serene against the azure sky.
 Slow-winding from their dim defiles
 O'er scorching waste and sedgy isles,
 From lordly Cairo, Mecca-bound,
 Threading the plain without a sound
 Save when the burdened camels groan
 Or tents are pitched by fountain-stone,
 The long-drawn caravan is seen
 Wrapped in the desert's blinding sheen.

No muezzin calls from minaret
 Though clear the burning sun has set ;
 But waste and hill and brooding sky
 Have stirred his soul to deep reply,

And he, the chief of all his tribe,
Has spurred him forward to ascribe
Glory to Allah, ere the gloom
And fierceness of the dread simoom
Shall overwhelm, or failing well
No pilgrim spare, His power to tell.

He plants his lance ; his steed he frees :
Light from the north the rising breeze
Lifts the hot cloud, and moans away
Down to some Petra's still decay,
Sad, as if wailing fall and rise
Were won from dying pilgrims' sighs, —
Their couch by billowy sands o'erblown
Where Azrael keeps watch alone.
And now, his sandals' weight unbound,
The desert space is holy ground ;
No more he sees the weary train,
The sombre hills, the dusty plain,
But greenest fields of Paradise
Shine fair before his ravished eyes.
He hears the flow of crystal streams,
He sees the wondrous light that gleams
From Allah's throne, ablaze with gems,
And, far below, the slender stems
Of plummy palms, whose ripe dates fall

92 "THE PRAYER IN THE DESERT."

When winds blow cool across the wall ;
While sweeter than the bulbul's note
 Within the dusk pomegranate bowers,
When his full soul he fain would float
 Forth to their yearning, flaming flowers,
The voice of angel Israfeel
 Comes winding, warbling through the air,—
O that 't were resurrection's peal,
 And he, the dead, might waken there,—
Waken and follow Eden-ward,
Lost in the splendor of the Lord !

Soon will his comrades round him throng,
While tents are pitched with jest and song ;
But not the night-dews, chill and fleet,
Nor noon-tide's burning, blasting heat,
Nor red simoom, nor mocking well
Can break his vision's sacred spell,
Nor lure his joy that forward flies
To build and sing in fairer skies.

O Arab ! we are one with thee !
All day we rove some desert sea ;
The winds are dead, the wells are dry,
Above us flames the torrid sky ;
And only in some twilight calm,

When fires are spent and air is balm,
Beyond our griefs and fears we ride ;
Our sandal-cares we cast aside ;
The clouds of doubt are backward blown,
And lo ! we meet the Lord alone !

ON THE LAWN.

THEN Delia with the dulcet voice came down

Where, on the lawn, beneath the maples' shade,
I sat with Lilian. In her hand she held
An open book ; and, throwing off her hat, While o'er her shoulders drooped her raven
hair,

And her lips trembled like the rose of June
When first the wandering zephyr comes to woo :

" Here in this book," she said, — in faltering tones,

As sweet and sad as those the cuckoo frames,
Hid in her leafy covert, when the wind
Sighs from the east and clouds are set for rain, —

" This book of love-lore, I have found a cry

Wrung from the heart; a simple, passionate strain

That makes me weep for pity. Let me read:”

No! I never can forget!
But my eyes must still be wet
With these unavailing tears
Through the wearying lapse of years;
And my cheek, so wan and faded,
Still must be the deepest shaded;
Never more can earthly balm
Bring my brow a moment's calm.

O the golden eve we met!
In the sea the sun had set;
Not a cloud to break the wide
Blaze of glory where the tide
And the sky shone, molten one,
As if earth and time were done;
So they were for you and me!
And the wind blew fresh and free
Down the sandy, sparkling shore:
Still I hear the breakers roar,
And the circling gulls behold,
Snow against the sunset gold.

Then, O mystery divine!
Each of each said, “Thou art mine!”
Saw it in the beaming eye,
Heard it in the rising sigh,

Felt it in the thrill that crept
Through our pulses as we stept
O'er the boat-side, and afar
Sailed to greet the vesper star.
Canst thou tell how feeling stole
Up, at last, to words, and soul
Mixed with soul, as wave with wave
Rolled that shining shore to lave ?
If thou canst, I'll tell thee how Leaf-buds open on the bough ;
Lilies whiten in the lake ;
Birds their sweet election make.
Ah ! the miracle is old ;
We were mated, wedded, given
With a sweetness manifold
Up to all earth knows of heaven.
And, despite these cruel years,
Bitter partings, silent tears,
Still I know the purpose stands, —
We have but unclasped our hands
Till across the shoreless sea
Thou shalt sail and dream with me !

No ! I never can forget !
In the land that knows no sorrow
We shall claim each other yet !
Still through scorn and grief and blame,
Outward frost and inward flame,
Wait I for the blissful morrow
That shall dawn where nought, I ween, Cometh wedded souls between !

All the airs of heaven will play
Soft about us on the day
We shall pledge ourselves to be Lovers through eternity.
So, when earthly suns are set,
Dearest love ! I can forget !

“Alas !” laughed Lilian, “ what a woful case ! ”

Be sure the lady shut herself in gloom
Of mouldy rooms, and scorned the kindly love
That might have come to make her cheerful still ;
Nor ever crossed her door to greet the sun,
Nor gathered violets under April skies,
Nor played with children in the winter eves ;
Thus she had dried her tears. Give me the book,

And if I cannot find a gayer song,
One whose pure honey is not turned to gall,
I ’ll say it is no hive of love. Lo, here, —
Here is a pleasant rhyme : ”

Morn of Eden ! All the angels must have warbled through the air
Just as dawn was lighting darkness slowly westward, silver fair ;
Never south wind blew so balmy from the dusky woodland dells,
Never lark such song uplifted where the crimson clover swells ;

Now the sunlight floods the valley and the crown of joy is mine, —
I shall wed my dove, my darling, ere another morning shine.

Peerless Daisy! down the meadow I can see thy windows gleam,
Curtained still, for thou dost slumber, lost in some delicious dream ;
So it be of me and thee, love, sleep may smooth thy tresses brown
Till thy mother wake thee: “ Daisy, thou must wear thy wedding-gown.”
So it be of me and thee, love, thou shalt stir not for the sun,
And from this May night forever will thy dream and mine be one.

With the waning purple twilight will the guests begin to meet,
And the house be full of music and the mirth of dancing
feet ;
I shall only see my Daisy, with the white rose in her
hair,
And the blushing face beneath it, O a thousand times
as fair !
And be glad when gayly backward is the latest parting thrown,
And, within the silent portal, we are left with love
alone.

Ah, happy Lilian ! As she ceased I saw,
Clasped in her azure belt, the lily buds
Young Gerald gathered from the lake at morn.
What had regret or grief to do with her ?

TAKE HEART!

ALL day the stormy wind has blown
From off the dark and rainy sea ;
No bird has past the window flown,
The only song has been the moan
The wind made in the willow-tree.

This is the summer's burial time ;
She died when dropped the earliest leaves,
And, cold upon her rosy prime,
Fell down the autumn's frosty rime, —
Yet I am not as one that grieves,

For well I know o'er sunny seas
The bluebird waits for April skies ;
And at the roots of forest trees
The May-flowers sleep in fragrant ease,
And violets hide their azure eyes.

O thou, by winds of grief o'erblown
Beside some golden summer's bier, —
Take heart ! Thy birds are only flown,
Thy blossoms sleeping, tearful sown,
To greet thee in the immortal year !

IN DREAMS.

MY love, my love, when falls the summer
rain

With soothing music on the midnight eaves,
I dream a dream of mingled bliss and pain :
Deep in our heart-fields do I rove again,
And bind with thee the ripe and shining
sheaves.

O Land of Joy ! the purple mountains flinging
Rich bars of shade across our sunny ease,
The spicy blooms, the groves with bird-notes ringing,
And, sweet through all, the wind a carol singing
Of fairer morns to rise o'er rosy seas.

Love's harvest clime, alas ! is ours no more !
For other hearts is heaped the golden grain !
We may not glean where glad we reapt before,

Nor sing the songs, nor wear the smiles we wore,

Nor hear the wind blow sweet across the plain.

Yet still, my love, when fall the summer showers

With soothing music on the midnight eaves,
I dream a dream that all my life o'erpowers :
Blithe in our heart-fields do I pluck the flowers,
And bind with thee the ripe and shining
sheaves.

DAILY DYING.

NOT in a moment drops the rose
That in a summer garden grows :
A robin sings beneath the tree
A twilight song of ecstasy,
And the red, red leaves at its fragrant heart,
Trembling so in delicious pain,
Fall to the ground with a sudden start,
And the grass is gay with a crimson stain ;
And a honey-bee, out of the fields of clover,
Heavily flying the garden over,
Brushes the stem as it passes by,
And others fall where the heart-leaves lie,
And air and dew, ere the night is done,
Have stolen the petals, every one.

And sunset's gleam of gorgeous dyes
Ne'er with one shadow fades away,
But slowly o'er those radiant skies
There steals the evening cold and gray,

And amber and violet linger still
When stars are over the eastern hill.

The maple does not shed its leaves
In one tempestuous scarlet rain,
But softly, when the south wind grieves,
Slow-wandering over wood and plain,
One by one they waver through
The Indian Summer's lazy blue,
And drop, at last, on the forest mould,
Coral and ruby and burning gold.

Our death is gradual, like to these ;
We die with every waning day ;
There is no waft of sorrow's breeze
But bears some heart-leaf slow away !
Up and on to the vast To Be
Our life is going eternally !
Less of earth than we had last year
Throbs in your veins and throbs in mine,
But the way to heaven is growing clear,
While the gates of the city fairer shine,
And the day that our latest treasures flee,
Wide they will open for you and me !

THE WIND IN THE PINE.

O WAILING Wind! what words are thine,
As through the dark, o'erhanging pine,
Beneath whose dusky shadow's play
I dream this August noon away,
Thou murmurest now with voice as sad
As if thy heart were never glad?
As if this weird and towering tree
Were all of life and love to thee,
And only from its cloister dim
Could rise thy low, mysterious hymn?

Thou shouldst not breathe so wild a lay
On summer's clearest, gayest day, —
For up the sombre branches through
I see the sky's delicious blue,
And, bright the mountain track across,
The sunshine falls on crag and moss,
And shows the white immortelle flower
That gleams alike through shine and shower,

In clustered grace amid the fern
Green-waving by the crystal burn ;
And fair beside the forest gloom
Lights up the aster's purple bloom,
And gilds the golden-rods that glow
In sprays of splendor, far below ;
While, deep within the windless wood,
 I hear a cuckoo's silver call,
That stirs the slumberous solitude
 With many a mellow rise and fall.

O I have watched thee woo the rose
So tenderly, at daylight's close !
And seen thee brush the morning dew
From off the violet's leaves of blue,
And whisper to a bed of daisies
Just newly blown, uncounted praises ;
 And then, (so fickle was thy love.)
Hide in the foxglove's honeyed cell,
And rock the tulip's gorgeous bell,
All in the face of the pure heaven, —
As if to roving winds 't were given
To gain the sweets of every flower,
And make each cup a bridal bower,
 When summer suns shone out above !
And songs that seraphs might have sung,

I've heard thee sing, and backward flung
My window lattice, fain to hear
The strain again so fine and clear !

But now those joyous tones are fled,
And, like a dirge above the dead,
Thy melancholy measures fall, —
O have they stirred a funeral pall Folded mutely, coldly over
Some maiden's fond and faithful lover ?
Or where, by stormy Labrador,
Through brooding mists the sea-birds soar,
Didst waft the bark the fisher gave
Light-winged as they, to morning wave,
Swift leagues across the sunless blue
'Till the red rocks were lost to view,
To see it sink, in evening foam,
Full in the sight of wife and home ?

Or, sadder far than scene like this,
O hast thou marked the living death

Of one so long bereft of bliss
He yearns to yield his lingering breath ? —
To whom the angel's face would be Like gleam of morn to souls at sea
All the night tossing wearily ! —

And thrilled and filled with his despair,
Hast come to grieve our mountain air ?

O wailing Wind ! I listen well ;
What mournful secret wouldst thou tell ?

Now night comes noiseless o'er the hill,
The vesper star looks out in heaven,

And all the air is hushed and still Save when a mountain bird has given
His rushing pinions to the blue
And silent depths he circles through,
Up to his eyrie in the shade

Some cliff's declining brow has made,
And I must to the valley go,
That lies in evening calm below.

There nested robins peaceful fold
Their wings above their breasts of gold,
But yet another note they 'll try
When they shall hear me gliding by ;
And waves of shade, in meadow-grass,
Will run to greet me as I pass,
And many a soft, caressing breeze
Come fragrant up from clover leas,
And scarlet honeysuckles droop
In welcome as I lightly stoop,

And part the arbored vines, and o'er
The threshold gain my chamber door.

But often, when the skies are clear

And not a whisper 's in the vale,
If down the mountain floats a tone
Sweet and sorrowful and lone

Like music blended with a moan,
I'll climb this rocky steep to hear,
Beneath the pine, thy tearful tale.

And I will tell thee all my heart,

And thou shalt give me back thine own,
And haply thus, when next we part,

Thy burden will have lighter grown.
Farewell! Thy woes shall all be mine,
O Singer in the mountain pine!

HEART-DEATHS.

HEARTS oft die bitter deaths before
The breath is breathed away,
And number weary twilights o'er,
Ere the last evening gray.

I've sometimes looked on closed eyes,
And folded hands of snow,
And said, "It was no sacrifice;
The heart went long ago."

O blessed Death, that makes our bed
Beneath the daisies deep!
O mocking Life, when hearts have fled,
And eyes must watch and weep!

A SUMMER DAY.

O FOR a summer day when time was young
And o'er the hills Aurora led the morn,
While olive groves and fir-dark mountains rung
To the clear winding of Diana's horn !
And on the woody heights, his Nymphs among,
Or Fauns eluding, in some cave forlorn,
Great Pan from woven reeds sweet music flung
To the soft winds that curled Demeter's corn.
And, lapt in languor, by the crystal springs
The white-armed Naiads leaned upon their urns,
And Sylphs flew past on silent, rainbow wings,
And Dryads whispered by the drooping ferns,
Where, hid in myrtles from Apollo's ray,
Resplendent Venus slept the noon away.

And sea-crowned Nereus watched the snowy sails
Cross the Ægean in some golden quest,

While from Olympus stole celestial gales

Perchance had ruffled glorious Juno's vest ;
And Jove's swift eagles soared above the vales,

Lost in the Sun-god as they neared the west ;
And shepherds told of Hermes wondrous tales,

And how Persephone was Pluto's guest, —
Till starry Night came down so still and fair

That gods and men were lulled to like repose,
And Sleep, the cherub, ere they were aware

With poppies twined their morning wreath of rose,

And, through the Ivory Gate, in blissful vision,

They roamed the gardens of the realm Elysian.

THE BLUEBIRD.

I AM so blithe and glad to-day !
At morn I heard a bluebird sing ;
The bluebird, warbling soul of spring,
The prophet of the leafy May, —
And I knew the violets under the tree
Would listen and look the bird to see,
Peeping timidly, here and there,
In purple and odor to charm the air ;
And the wind-flower lift its rose-veined cup,
In the leaves of the old year buried up,
And all the delicate buds that bloom
On the moss-beds, deep in the forest gloom,
Would stir in their slumber, and catch the strain,
And dream of the sun and the April rain, —
For spring has come when the bluebird sings,
And folds in the maple his glossy wings,

And the wind may blow and the storm may fall,
But the voice of summer is heard in all.

I am so blithe and glad to-day !
 My heart, beside the bluebird, sings,
 And folds, serene, its weary wings,
And knows the hours lead on to May.

ALLAN.

IF it were Allan's step that stirred
The rose by the door! — or a deeper word
In the song of the camp, he gayly sings,
That shook the tree and the twining rings
Of the vines that over my casement creep!
The moon is up; does the night wind sleep?
So in the hush and the tender shine
'T were Allan, what joy could mate with mine?

Allan's bride I had been to-night;
Did you not hear a footstep light,
Over the flag-stone, up the stair?
O my heart! if 't were Allan there,
Out of his camp in the wild Southwest
Come to clasp his bride to his breast!
See! a shadow athwart the floor!
Lift the latch quickly; open the door
And let my lover, my warrior in,
That I may be first his smile to win.

Ah, no ! nor step, nor voice in tune,
But the wind that woke with the climbing moon
To stir the boughs, and along the stair
Sigh for the foot that falls not there !
But the swaying shade of the willow thrown
Dark on the wall and the wide hearth-stone !
Low let the curtains fall ; loose my hair ;
What care I though the night be fair ?
All the stars in the skies might set
If Allan could whisper, “ Margaret ! ”

He will not come ; but his thoughts, I know,
Are of home and me in the tent-fire’s glow ;
And he bends by the flickering flame to write,
“ Love, it is still our wedding night !
For in heart and soul, though leagues divide,
Fondly I clasp my promised bride.”
Or out in the darkness he whispers low,
As he follows the track of the flying foe,
“ O if my path to-night were free,
How swift would I ride, my love, to thee ! ”

God be his keeper !—listen ! I hear Steps by the garden-gate—now they draw near !
Throw up the curtain ; the moon’s in the west ;

The wind in the willow is lulled to rest ;
Hush ! there 's a foot on the stone, the stair, —
Is it some messenger sent to bear Tidings of sorrow ? Unbar the door
And see who hurries the threshold o'er.
What greeting ! My eyes with tears are wet, —
O joy ! it is Allan ! — “ My Margaret ! ”

HEAVEN, O LORD, I CANNOT LOSE.

NOW summer finds her perfect prime !
 Sweet blows the wind from western calms ;
 On every bower red roses climb ;
 The meadows sleep in mingled balms.
 Nor stream, nor bank the wayside by,
 But lilies float and daisies throng,
 Nor space of blue and sunny sky
 That is not cleft with soaring song.
 O flowery morns, O tuneful eves,
 Fly swift ! my soul ye cannot fill !
 Bring the ripe fruit, the garnered sheaves,
 The drifting snows on plain and hill.
 Alike, to me, fall frosts and dews ;
 But, Heaven, O Lord, I cannot lose !

Warm hands to-day are clasped in mine ;
 Fond hearts my mirth or mourning share ;
 And, over hope's horizon line,
 The future dawns, serenely fair.

Yet still, though fervent vow denies,
 I know the rapture will not stay ;
Some wind of grief or doubt will rise
 And turn my rosy sky to gray.
I shall awake, in rainy morn,
 To find my hearth left lone and drear ;
Thus, half in sadness, half in scorn,
 I let my life burn on as clear
Though friends grow cold or fond love woos ;
But Heaven, O Lord, I cannot lose !

In golden hours the angel Peace
 Comes down and broods me with her wings :
I gain from sorrow sweet release ;
 I mate me with divinest things ;
When shapes of guilt and gloom arise
 And far the radiant angel flees, —
My song is lost in mournful sighs,
 My wine of triumph left but lees.
In vain for me her pinions shine,
 And pure, celestial days begin ;
Earth's passion-flowers I still must twine,
 Nor braid one beauteous-lily in.
Ah ! is it good or ill I choose ?
But Heaven, O Lord, I cannot lose !

120 HEAVEN, O LORD, I CANNOT LOSE.

So wait I. Every day that dies
With flush and fragrance born of June,
I know shall more resplendent rise
Where summer needs nor sun nor moon.
And every bud, on love's low tree,
Whose mocking crimson flames and falls,
In fullest flower I yet shall see
High blooming by the jasper walls.
Nay, every sin that dims my days,
And wild regrets that veil the sun,
Shall fade before those dazzling rays,
And my long glory be begun !
Let the years come to bless or bruise ;
Thy Heaven, O Lord, I shall not lose !

NIGHT-FALL.

ROSE and amber round the sun,
Lo ! another day is done !
Now while soft the night-winds call,
Dews and purple shadows fall,
And upon the horizon's rim
Sleep the mountains vast and dim.
In the embrace of watching skies
Earth will rest till morning rise.

When the shadows fall for me,
Love ! my rose and amber be !
And on life's horizon rim
Heavenly mountains slumber dim.
Saviour ! Jesus ! to thy breast
Fold me then in perfect rest ;
Safe in shielding such as thine
Till the eternal morning shine !

THE BIRD AT GREENWOOD.

FROM the grave of a lovely maiden
 A white cross upward sprung,
And aloft on the carved marble
 A Bird in the sunset sung.

The sky was a dome of glory
 As the sun dropped down in the sea,
And the dusk of the purple shadows
 Fell over the graves and me.

And winds from the meadows blowing,
 Whispered and died away,
But the Bird sang on in the stillness
 Of the slowly waning day.

Sweet as the hymns of angels
 Floating the valley o'er,

Were the notes the twilight zephyrs
Down from the white cross bore ;

And the loved ones slept no longer
Under the daisied green,
But smiled in immortal beauty
The radiant clouds between.

Sorrow and parting over,
Lover and maid were there,
And the mother pressed to her bosom
The babe with its golden hair ;

While the Bird sang louder, clearer,
A rich, exulting lay,
Till the evening shades grew darker,
And the vision passed away.

Then the Singer with silent pinion
Up from the white cross flew,
Over the slumbering ocean,
Into the deepening blue.

Perhaps in a swaying willow
It sought its sheltered nest,

124 THE BIRD AT GREENWOOD.

And, lulled by the leafy murmur,
 Stooped to delicious rest.

Perhaps, — by the latest crimson
 That lingered along the strand,
Over the fading sunset
 It soared to the Deathless Land.

TRUST.

I AM not afraid of dying ;
When the midnight winds are sighing
I could beckon them to waft me, waft me to the upper skies ;
And when clear the moon has risen
From her cloudy, eastern prison,
I could sink with her o'er hills of dawn, nor wish again to rise.

Earth with charms I cannot number
Woos me to a placid slumber, Dreamless, deep, and all unbroken 'neath the summer turf so green ;
Roses everywhere are blowing ;
Will a better time for going To the land of sleep and silence come life's morn and eve between ?

I am not afraid of dying ;
In such holy quiet lying,
There would come no weary waking with a weight upon my breast ;
Were the mornings gray or golden,
By a sweet enchantment holden
I should slumber till the angels bore me up to heavenly rest.

Mine 's a short and simple story ;
O ! thou tender Lord of Glory !
Take me gently in thy bosom when I 'm weary of the way !
Only let me see Thee clearer,
Only whisper, " Child, come nearer," —
So my living shall be blessèd as my welcome dying day.

WINTHROP EARL.

ROSY mouth and eyes of gray
 Soft as twilight's tender ray,
 Voice like song of robin sung
 Blooming groves of May among,
 Silken hair in sunny curl, —
 How we loved him — Winthrop Earl !

Twice the summer round his head
 Wreathed its roses white and red ;
 Twice o'er garden, roof, and wall
 Light he watched the snow-flakes fall ;
 Then from life's bewildering whirl
 Fled forever — Winthrop Earl !

Ere had blown one chilling breeze,
 Lo ! he sought unruffled seas !
 Shunned the gulfs, the treacherous sands,
 Neared the far, celestial lands, —
 So a stainless sail to furl
 In God's harbor — Winthrop Earl !

THE PRIEST AND I.

AM I too happy ? Have I lost
The hymns of heaven, the shining host,
For the low song my Bertrand sings
Beneath the shade the myrtle flings
Across the door in sunset glow ?
And for my cherub Angelo ? —
My glorious boy with sweeter smile
Than wears, within St. Francis's aisle,
That infant John the friars say
Will yet take wing and soar away !
Nay, — Mary, grace ! with hair of gold
And brow like the young Christ's you hold,
O'er the high altar, hovering fair,
Upborne by clear, celestial air !

How calm he sleeps upon my breast !
Would the great Father send such guest
Into my bosom, if to win
And welcome were a deadly sin ?

Or give the boy my Bertrand's eyes
If evil lurked in Bertrand's guise ?
Hark ! 't is his step across the sward ;
Forgive me if I wander, Lord !
But O, I surely love Thee more
For the dear face beside the door,
And for the fond arms' tender fold,
Than if I knelt, a maiden cold,
And only knew of love and Thee
What the lone cloister taught to me.

And yet the Priest says I have sealed
My own damnation ; madly healed
My orphan sorrow with a name
Will send me straight to burning flame !
Because I dared to give my vows
To Bertrand ; would not be the spouse
Of Holy Church, and wear the veil
Within the convent's dreary pale, —
Our Lady's, — hid in dusk of trees
High up the chilly Pyrenees,
Where the white, ghostly nuns look out,
And wild winds toss the boughs about,
And moan and mutter through the air,
Of fast and scourge and midnight prayer.

O, what a living death were mine,
Locked in that gloom of fir and pine !

And here, like roses to the sun,
My bright days open, one by one ;
And, deep within their bloom, my heart
Sings like some nightingale apart
In orange grove, while winds of May
Up the still valley waft his lay !
And have I failed of heaven for this ?
Bartered my soul for Bertrand's kiss ?
Foregone sweet Mary's kindly care
Because my boy, like hers, is fair ?
And does God mock our yearnings so ?
Nay ! 't is a fiendish lie, I know !
God smiles on earth, though throned above ;
And what is heaven but purer love ?
We three, together, glad will go, —
Bertrand and I and Angelo !

ROBERT BURNS.

O MY Poet! thou didst cast it
In the furrow of the years,
That “A man’s a man for a’ that;”
Thou didst water it with tears.
Now the harvest-time is coming;
Now the fields are white with grain;
Thou, the sower, art the reaper,
Binding sheaves on every plain.
From thy errors we absolve thee,
Soul at rest beneath the sod! —
Say, “He was of man the lover;
Leave him to the love of God.”

There are kings with crown and sceptre
Ruling proud o’er shores and seas; —
Thou hast empire wider, grander,
Than the stateliest of these.
Theirs by mountain chains is bounded,
Or a river’s winding line;

Thine sweeps broad from tropic palm-trees
To the farthest polar pine.
And, till dawn millennial ages,
As their memory backward turns,
Truest Brother, sweetest Singer,
Men shall reckon Robert Burns.

THE EVENING ANGEL.

THE snowy day was sinking down
To gloomy eve, without a star,
And winds, wild moaning from the sea,
Swept inward o'er the harbor bar.

Half dreaming, by the twilight fire,
Of vanished loves and snow-piled graves,
I sang a wind-like song that stole
From the drear waste of memory's waves.

The curtains o'er the windows fell ;
The clock ticked softly on the wall ;
The firelight glowed ; but, in my heart,
What drifting snows enveloped all !

Still deeper grew the shadows' play ;
The wind blew wilder from the sea ;

When a warm hand was laid in mine,
And lo ! an Angel watched with me !

A murmuring music filled the room ;
The air grew sweet with spring-time flowers ;
The clock ticked softer on the wall,
As loth to count immortal hours.

No word the Angel spoke, but love
So tender-true was in his smile,
And on his brow such perfect peace,
That I, who sighed and wept erewhile,

Grew strong and tranquil in his glance ;
It was no atmosphere for tears ;
And, from his radiance, golden gleams
Illumined past and coming years.

I did not breathe a single prayer ;
I did not ask for love or joy ;
But all my quiet heart was full
Of trust and faith without alloy.

* * * *

Now sank the snowy evening down
To midnight gloom without a star,

And winds, wild moaning from the sea,
Swept inward o'er the harbor bar.

But neither night nor wailing wind
Could stir my soul's celestial calm ;
The Angel's holy peace was mine,
And memory's waves were waves of balm !

THE PRISONER'S RELEASE.

“ Among those who were thrown into the dungeons of Venice was a young girl from the country, scarcely sixteen, who did not live to be put to the torture, but was found dead upon the floor of her cell.” — Records of the Inquisition.

LO, in the east the wan moon climbs
Above the mellow minster chimes,
And wafted peal and light of stars
Come faintly through my prison-bars.
I cannot hear the dripping oar,
Nor boatman's call from off the shore,
Only, flooding the beach below,
I mark the sea-waves come and go ;
And listen ! From my dungeon-tower
The clock tolls out the midnight hour.
Oh, that my latest day were done,
And I the evening peace had won !
God of mercy ! pity me !
Take me quickly up to Thee !

In dreams I 've lived my childhood o'er
Since last the jailer shut the door ;

Along the lofty Apennines
I saw again the dusky pines,
And heard the rush of snow-fed streams,
And caught the torrent's silver gleams.
From rock to rock the chamois sprung ;
High in the blue the eagle hung ;
And I felt the sweet wind over me blow
From vales where the orange and jasmine grow ;
But dearer than hill or stream or tree,
Voices I loved were calling me !
I woke. The waning moon had risen,
And dimly shone athwart the prison ;
My hair was damp with dungeon dew,
A chill breath crept the grating through,
And on my brain a weight was prest
And my heart beat slow in my aching breast, —
Faint and slow as the waves that fall
With the ebbing tide below the wall.
Jesus ! Lord ! I cry to Thee !
By Thy woes, deliver me !

Hark ! The chimes die soft away,
And soon will dawn another day ;
Yet ere for watching eyes it shine
There will be darkness over mine,
And I shall sleep on the stony floor

The sleep that never will waken more !
More black and chill the dungeon grows ;
Unheard, beneath, the sea-wave flows ;
And fainter, slower, comes my breath, —
Can it be dying ? Can it be death ?
No ! It is life ! for the angels lean
Out of heaven to woo me there !
And listen ! What do those voices mean,
Filling with music all the air ?
Now in chorus they swell and rise,
Floating up to the ravished skies ;
And now they warble so near, so near,
They bear me away to the blessed sphere !
God of love ! O welcome me !
Now I come, — I come to Thee !

WHEN I AM DEAD.

WHEN I am dead, O ! let it be,
Jesus ! for blessed rest in Thee !
Then, though my ear had never known
The rapture of a loving tone,
Nor tender kisses prest my brow
When heart to heart gave holiest vow,
Nor fame's bewildering music stole
Like a sweet fever through my soul, --
I shall lie down as kings do lie,
In royal state and majesty ;
Nor cedar need, nor purple fold,
Nor sculptured stone, nor fretted gold,
But find my silent chamber there
Than fairest couch of earth more fair,
For Thou, the King of kings, shalt spread
The pillow for my weary head.

And whether, where I rest alone,
Come foes to scorn or friends to moan,

I shall not heed them, — hid in joy,
Nor friend can give, nor foe alloy ;
But peaceful sleep, as children slumber
Whose mother's thoughts the minutes number,
For Thou, the Lord, with love divine
Shalt watch beside that grave of mine.

20721

~~1977~~

A Nineteenth Century Poetess

The death of Edna Dean Proctor, in her ninety-fifth year, recalls the golden period of our New England women minor poets, which blossomed in the mid-nineteenth century under the inspiration of Emerson, Longfellow and Whittier. Miss Proctor's first and most noteworthy volume of poems was published in 1866, but her verses had already attracted some attention in the periodicals of the time. She belonged to the epoch of Elizabeth Akers Allen, Lucy Larcom and Nora Perry, and almost to that of Frances Osgood. All these she had long out-lived. Her poetry, of pleasing and formal character, was strongly marked by the didactic tendency of the period; it exhorted to hopefulness and to intellectual serenity, and is well represented by one of its most popular examples, which was entitled "Take Heart."

All day the stormy wind has blown

From off the dark and rainy sea;

No bird has past the window flown,

The only song has been the moan

The wind made in the willow-tree.

This is the summer's burial time:

She died when dropped the earliest leaves;

And, cold upon her rosy prime

Fell direful autumn's frosty rime;

Yet I am not as one who grieves—

For well I know o'er sunny seas

The bluebird waits for April skies;

And at the roots of forest trees

The mayflowers sleep in fragrant ease,

And violets hide their azure eyes.

O thou, by winds of grief o'erblown

Beside some summer's golden bier—

Take heart! thy birds are only flown,

Thy blossoms sleeping, tearful sown,

To greet thee in the immortal year!

Few of our poets, it is needless to say, write in this vein now. Miss Proctor was exactly the contemporary of Emily Dickinson, but her vein was worlds away from that of the restless, disturbed and disturbing genius of Amherst. Emily Dickinson had no such popularity in her day as Miss Proctor, Miss Larcom or Mrs. Akers Allen enjoyed, but she will be longer remembered than any of them. Miss Proctor wrote much besides poetry, and her books and press writings generally bespoke the same benevolence of heart that breathed in her verse.

EDNA DEAN PROCTOR DEAD

UC SOUTHERN REGIONAL LIBRARY FACILITY

Was
She

A 001 419 677 8
Was

Edna Dean Proctor, poet of a generation ago, whose circle of friends included Henry Ward Beecher and John Greenleaf Whittier, died in her apartments at the Kendall Hotel in Framingham yesterday in her ninety-fifth year. She had never regained her strength after breaking her ankle last winter in Atlantic City.

Edna Dean Proctor was born in Henniker, N. H., Sept. 18, 1829, on a hill overlooking the Contoocook River. Although after the years of her youth her life took her far from New Hampshire, she considered that State her own. In 1899 she wrote on the occasion of its first Old Home Week, "The Hills Are Home."

After studying at Concord, N. H., and at South Hadley, Miss Proctor taught drawing and music at Woodstock, Conn., and then became governess in the family of Henry C. Bowen, at Brooklyn. Subsequently she travelled widely in Europe and was one of the first American women to make an extensive trip in Russia. As a result of her study of the people, she wrote her "Russian Journey," which prophesied the vast transformation of that country. In later years she made her home in Framingham, but spent much time in Atlantic City and Washington.

While in Brooklyn she became acquainted with Henry Ward Beecher. She published a volume of the most striking excerpts from his sermons under the title "Life Thoughts," and because another similar book by another author soon appeared, apparently with Beecher's approval, she severely rebuked the pastor. His explanation proving satisfactory to her, she forgave him and at his request wrote him a letter to that effect. As an indirect result of her action, her name was brought into the Beecher-Tilton case by Francis D. Moulton. Subsequently she sued Moulton for libel for $100,000. Winning complete vindication, she settled with the defendant for the amount merely which the litigation cost her.

Her first book of poems was published in 1867, and before that she had already written verse which attracted the attention of Whittier; yet in 1918 she had retold in stirring poetry an incident of the retreat toward the Marne, and continued to produce energetic lines almost to the end of her life.

The grown people of today, who were the school children of Miss Proctor's time, remembered especially her patriotic songs and her poems which appear in their school books. Invariably championing the cause of freedom and democracy, she wrote with particular zest of the Indians, of patriotism, of a new Russia and of "The Glory of Toil," as she entitled her latest book of poems, published only recently.

Surviving Miss Proctor, besides a niece, Mrs. Pitts, are two nephews, David G. Proctor, song writer for Weber & Fields, New York, and Prescott Coolidge of Berkeley, Calif., and two other nieces, Mrs. Grace W. Van Praag of Framingham, and Mrs. Julia White of Peoria, Ill.

